FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, May, 14.

To Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

We have Suffolk. It was taken last evening, by Maj. Doner. All is quiet.

Maj.-Gen. McCLELLAN'S troops are at Cumberland.

Major-General Commanding.

IMPORTANT REPORTS OF RELEASED PRISONERS.

The Fortress Monroe correspondent of the Baltimore American gives the following highly important information in a letter dated the 12th inst.:

The rebel steamers Curtis Peck and Northampton left Richmond this morning at daylight, having on board eight hundred released Federal prisoners. Our flagboats went up above Newport's News, and took up with them the 300 rebel prisoners sent here from Williamsburgh by Gen. McCLELLAN, who were released and sent to Richmond. The boats have just arrived as the boat is about leaving, and I have only time to learn that Col. CONCORAN is not among them, and that there are but few officers among the party.

The released Federal prisoners, 800 in number, will leave here to-morrow morning for Baltimore on the steamers Kent and Hero. From Baltimore they will go direct to Washington to have their accounts settled. They say that the fall of Norfolk had added to the consternation of the rebels.

They report that the steamers Monitor and Naugatuck were passed by them beyond City Point, steaming up toward Richmond, and the impression was that they would reach Rocketts during the evening. The iron-clad steamer Galena, which went up last week, had gotten off the bar on which she was stopped, and was steaming on after the Naugatuck and Monitor toward Richmond. They had been fired upon upon by some of the batteries, but merely returned the shot as they passed, deeming them of too much insignificance to stop to punish them for their impertinence. Their shots were, of course, harmless on the iron-clads.

The returned prisoners report that the excitement in Richmond was becoming intense, and that its evacuation was looked upon as a mere question of time. Some of the wealthy Secessionists were removing their plate and property out of the city, whilst the Union men were concealing theirs in the city.

The gamblers and pickpockets, and worthless portion of the community, were urging the destruction of the city by fire, which was favored by the foreign troops; but the Virginia troops and the old citizens were strongly opposed to this vandalism. JEFF. DAVIS and the Government officials declared that they would resist to the last, but it was believed that they were secretly preparing for an evacuation.

Some troops had been sent northward to check the advance of McDOWELL, and the most violent declared their intention of throwing their whole army on Washington, but the Union men believed this to be a mere ruse to deceive the people. The terror of the gunboats was most intense, and they anticipated great consternation when the heavy guns of the Monitor and Naugatuck sounded in the vicinity of Richmond. The rebel steamers Jamestown and Yorktown were at Rocket's, near Richmond, when the flag-steamer left.

NEWS RECEIVED IN WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times:

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, May 14.

GOV. SPRAGUE, who has been with the advance of the army of the Potomac, arrived here yesterday, and left for Rhode Island last evening. The Governor left the White House, a point on the Pamunkey River, on Monday. The headquarters of our advance was then at that place. He reports that he has no doubt the rebels intend to make a stand at Bottom's Bridge, but he thinks when they come to hear of the surrender of Norfolk and Portsmouth, the evacuation of Sewall's Point and Craney Island, and the destruction of the Merrimac, that they will, as a military necessity, be obliged to fly from Virginia. This is most likely, not only from the above-named reasons, but because they fear they will be cut off by FREMONT from making their exit down the valley on the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, and by BURNSIDE, who will cut off their retreat through North Carolina, by destroying all the railroad facilities in that section. It is stated that the rebels, under the recommendation of JEFF. DAVIS, have constructed a railroad from Danville, Va., to Greensborough, in North Carolina. This is not true, however.

Gov. SPRAGUE says our losses at Williamsburgh, in killed, wounded and missing, will amount to about two thousand, and that the rebel loss was not less. He says the battle at West Point, under FRANKLIN, was much more severe than reported; that at least five hundred of our men were taken prisoners, the enemy taking advantage of the landing of our troops. The gunboats came up in good time, and saved FRANKLIN from suffering a severe disaster.

Gov. SPRAGUE speaks in the highest terms of Gen. STONEMAN, who commands the advance, and from the evacuation of Yorktown until the present has been pressing the enemy's rear, frequently engaging him. Near New Kent Court-house, STONEMAN, at the head of a Battalion of the Sixth U. S. Cavalry, engaged a cavalry regiment of rebels, and after a most brilliant engagement routed them; and when about to pursue them, he came upon a rebel battery, and not having any support he fell back. Ever since he left Yorktown Gen. STONEMAN has provisioned his troops upon fresh meat and bread taken from the enemy. The whole army has moved so fast, and the roads are so bad, that the supply trains had not got up when Gen. SPRAGUE left. The delay was partly on that account.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, May 14.

The information from the main body of Gen. McCLELLAN'S army at Cumberland is up to 9 o'clock yesterday. In the course of the day they had several inconsiderable skirmishes with the rebels, who were in their immediate front.

Nearly 900 released Union prisoners have arrived here from the South.

DISPATCH FROM THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Sunday, May 11.

Owing to the storm but one boat came to-day from Fortress Monroe to Cherrystone. There was but little news brought, and that was sent to the Press at noon.

THE CASUALTIES AT WILLIAMSBURGH.

WILLIAMSBURGH, Tuesday, May 13.

The reports of the killed and wounded in the battle of Williamsburgh are very incorrect. I have the authority of Lieut.-Col. WELLS, the Provost-Marshal of the city, for saying that the casualties in his regiment (First Massachusetts) are inaccurate, and I know by the graves now here, that the loss of the Excelsior Brigade is also incorrect, particularly in reference to the First Regiment of that brigade. For instance, Col. DWIGHT is not killed, but badly wounded, and on his way to New-York. The list of Captains is also wrong. The only Captain killed in the First Excelsior (DWIGHT'S regiment) is not mentioned, namely, Capt. HENRY BROOKS O'REILLY. Three other Captains reported killed, namely, Capt. BOUN, not BRUNO, as printed, Capt. BUGHER and Capt. PRICE, of New-York, are missing, and are reported prisoners at Richmond. Capt. MAHAN has gone home wounded to New-York. Lieut. HAYNOR, commanding a company in that regiment, was also killed. He was a son of Major HAYNOR, of Gen. WOOL'S staff.

GEN. McCLELLAN'S ADVANCE.

Our Army Advancing—Capture of a Rebel Battery—Union Feeling—White Flags Abundant—Beautiful Weather—The Country Beyond Williamsburgh—Gen. McClellan and his Staff—The Local Feeling—The Rebel Retreat.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

BURNT ORDINARY, Va., May 9, 1862—8 P. M.

Gen. KEYES has advanced his headquarters to-day twelve miles beyond Williamsburgh, on the road toward New-Kent Court-house, which now lies 15 or 16 miles beyond him. His corps is in the advance, the Second Rhode Island and the Sixty-eighth Pennsylvania being reported over the Chickahominy, near its mouth, 10 or 15 miles beyond us, with STONEMAN'S Cavalry. The rebels are to make no stand here, as was reported, but continue their rapid flight toward Richmond: The report now is that they are to make their stand 10 miles this side of that city.

The Second Rhode Island came up with a battery of four guns, supported by infantry, stationed at one of the fords of the Chickahominy, to dispute their passage: Without standing on etiquette, the brave Rhode Islanders delivered their fire and charged bayonets, putting the Confederates to instant route, many of them throwing away their muskets and running as though the whole army of the Potomac was after them.

A hospital has been established on the James River opposite Williamsburgh, where some 500 of those wounded in the engagement of Monday have been removed. Yesterday a Confederate vessel, supposed to be the Merrimac, was seen within one or two miles of the place, going up toward Richmond:

SATURDAY, May 10—7 A. M.

We have evidence of the existence of-Union sentiment here, though some professions of this nature are far from reliable. One planter, in his anxiety to make a good showing, concealed his negroes, and declared himself to be not only a good Unionist, but an Anti-Slavery man as well. But, in another family, I hear of an old patriarch who died of grief because of the dissolution of the Union.

White flags are displayed from the houses along the way as we approach. Most of the women and elderly persons remain, but the ablebodied men are nearly all in the army, willingly or unwillingly. Some families, deprived of all their male members, are living together for mutual company and protection.

The negroes have been told the most absurd stories about our designs against them; that we would put them into wagons and drive them, and the like. This was for the purpose of inducing them to leave for the South; but they do not seem to have been deceived, and have apparently a more intelligent idea of the true character of the Northerners than many of their masters.

We have had beautiful weather thus far upon our march, and to-day dawns brightly. Most of our troops, in leaving their Camp below Williamsburgh, passed around the town, but a few regiments passed through on the main street, with colors flying and bands playing "Yankee Doodle," "Dixie," and other airs. The women and children, who now constitute almost the only inhabitants of the place, gathered at the windows and doors and door-steps, and gazed curiously on the spectacle, while the negroes lolled on the fences, witnessing the passage of the army with evident satisfaction.

For six miles beyond Williamsburgh the country was heavily wooded, then we came upon a fine open country, with farms magnificent for size, producing wheat and corn, with some tobacco, though the land is now given up almost entirely to the former staples. The wheat fields are already green with blades ten or a dozen inches high, and present a beautiful sight as they wave in the sun. Streams are plenty, and our soldiers find an abundance of good water.

The country rises gradually, and over the Chickahominy we came upon the level country between that and Richmond. It is an inviting region and shows fewer marks of the ravages of war than any section we have yet come upon. The fences are standing in good order; the houses, as a general thing, occupied and undisturbed. Provisions abundant, and plenty seems to prevail.

BARBOURSVILLE, Va., Saturday—2 P. M.

At this point we are within five miles of West Point, as I am told by one of Gen. PORTER'S aids, who has just come up from there. Gen. PORTER'S troops have not got on their way inland, but must be shortly, as our army is rapidly concentrating around Richmond. Gen. McCLELLAN came up this morning as far as the house of a Dr. JONES, just beyond Barboursville, where I am now writing. He remained here for an hour or two, the gentlemen of his Staff entertaining themselves with several intelligent young ladies belonging to the doctor's family. The scene about the house as I entered was one for a painter. At one side of the porch the "Little Corporal" stood, in the sun, surrounded by several of his Generals, members of his Staff, the Prince DE JOINVILLE, in citizen's dress, and a huge fur cap, being conspicuous among them, sauntering about with his hands in his breeches pockets. On the steps and the porch was a similar group of notables taking their ease at their noonday halt. In the hall were several gathered in a little group about several ladies standing in a side doorway, and conversing with great animation, receiving and imparting new ideas of the feeling prevailing in the two sections toward each other. Among those here were three young English officers, and the Duc DE CHATRES, whose younger brother came in while we were waiting, hot and dusty from a long ride he had taken with a message from Gen. McCLELLAN. I saw the young nobleman driving about in hot haste during the fight of Monday, so it would appear that he is a useful, as well as an ornamental, member of the General's Staff. Your correspondent consoled himself with his own seedy condition by the discovery that this scion of royalty was in an even more dilapidated condition as to wardrobe.

What I learn of local feeling, thus far, in my journeying into Virginia, increases my hope of a peaceful restoration of this State to the Union, when we shall have driven the Confederates away from her borders. State pride and local feeling is strong; but there appears to be little bitterness of feeling toward the North, except such as is engendered by an entire misapprehension of the purpose and animus of this war. Nothing will do so much to remove this misapprehension as intercourse with Northerners in the person of the officers of our army. The ladies in the family, as the result of to-day's conversation with our officers, tell me that they have either been greatly misled as to the sentiments and feelings of the North, or the gentlemen of Gen. McCLELLAN'S staff cannot be true representatives of Northern opinion.

I have seen reason to somewhat modify my first opinion of the demoralization of the Southern army, based upon such hasty statements as I received from others. Their retreat, as a whole, seems to have been conducted in the masterly manner for which JOHNSTON has distinguished himself. Near Williamsburgh, there were many evidences of the hasty flight of the rear guard, in deserted artillery, munitions of war, as well as in the knapsacks, tents, wagons, and other things strewing the way. But to-day there are no signs of anything but deliberation. the roads being so much better as to enable the army trains to pass without difficulty.

I learn here that JOHNSTON and MAGRUDER separated at Barboursville, one taking the right and the other the left. It is probable that Gen. FRANKLIN was attacked by the advance guard of JOHNSTON at West Point, as he must have been very near them in passing. They expected another fight on Monday, being determined to make a stand to delay our progress, and their scouts reporting our troops to be rapidly advancing upon them. As we did not come they continued on their way without stopping for us.

I have omitted to mention before, that on Thursday last, Gen. KLEIN, of Gen. CASEY'S Division, made a reconnoissance with two squadrons of Sixth Cavalry, Capts. HAMILTON and GUY, and a section of artillery. He advanced to York River, where he found a good landing six miles from Williamsburgh. Four prisoners were taken. Many of the inhabitants subsequently came to his headquarters, demanding protection for themselves and property, including, in some cases, negroes; but such of the latter as wished to go down the peninsula were not molested, their owners being left to the civil authorities for the recovery of this species of "portable property."

DEPARTMENT OF THE RAPPAHANNOCK.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

FALMOUTH, Wednesday, May 14.

The rebel lines, to all appearance, are maintained as formerly, and it seems to be definitely established that they are throwing up earthworks; but I apprehend that the earthworks are of a very simple character, and merely intended as a cover for their pickets, as it surely is not their intention to preserve an isolated line in this vicinity. Their outposts are not more than one hundred rods distant from ours, and pickets on both sides are alternately driven in. This constitutes the sole military movement that is mentionable.

DEPARTMENT OF THE SHENANDOAH.

STRASBURGH, Va., Wednesday, May 14.

A northeaster set in last night. It is a godsend to agriculture and the sanitary condition of our troops.

Deserters and prisoners continue to come in, and are consigned to the charge of Col. BATCHELDOR, the Provost Marshal. Several important cases have been forwarded to Washington to-day by order of Col. CLARKE, chief aid of Gen. BANKS, for final disposal.

IMPORTANT FROM ARKANSAS.

A Portion of Gen. Curtis' Army Pushing Northward—The Advance of the Remainder Pushing for Little Rock.

Correspondence of the St. Louis Democrat.

BATESVILLE, Ark., Saturday, May 10.

A portion of Gen. DAVIS' and Gen. ASBOTH'S Divisions, and two of Gen. SIGEL'S regiments, left here to-day for the North. An adequate force is still here, however, for operations in this direction,

Our advance, under Gen. Osterhaus, crossed the White River on the 9th, and took the road to Little Rock.

As many as 150 persons per day have come forward and taken the oath of allegiance, embracing judges, ministers, and many of the most influential citizens.

The sentiment of the people is rapidly becoming more and more loyal. News of our occupation of this place was received by Gen. REZIOR, at Little Rock, on the 5th, and produced great excitement. Some of the citizens advised peace, while others were rampant for defending the city to the last extremity. On the following day the Governor issued a proclamation, calling on the State Militia to repair immediately to the Capital to repel the invaders. Many of the militia were issuing special calls. Six thousand Texans were daily expected at Little Rock, but they were under orders for Corinth.

Guerrilla bands were being formed in some sections, and large mobs may be mustered at County seats, but no serious obstacles to our advance are feared.

ALBERT PIKE, at last accounts, was camped at Bog-dépôt, 160 miles southwest of Fort Smith.

DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Hon. Edward Stanly Appointed Military Governor.

Hon. EDWARD STANLY arrived in this City yesterday, by steamer from San Francisco, en route for Washington, whither he goes to signify his acceptance of the Military Governorship of North Carolina, to which he was been appointed by Mr. LINCOLN. On April 9, he resigned his position as City and County Attorney of San Francisco, and his letter announcing this elicited the following response from Gov. STANFORD:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO, April 9, 1862.

To Hon. Edward Stanly:

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your note of to-day's date, and take occasion to congratulate you most cordially upon receiving the appointment of Military Governor of North Carolina at the hands of the President. It is a flattering testimonial of your ability and worth, and it will be hailed with delight by all who love the Union in the old North State. * *

I have the honor to be, dear Sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant. LELAND STANFORD.

In reply to a letter from numerous prominent citizens of the State, asking him to accept the compliment of a public dinner, Mr. STANLY wrote:

SAN FRANCISCO, April 17, 1862.

To Hons. S. J. Field, W. W. Cone, E. Norton, Leland Stanford, J. F. Chellis, Ogden Hoffman and others:

GENTLEMEN: I have received, with deep sensibility, your communication of yesterday, expressing in terms, too flattering, your approbation of my past public career as a firm friend of the Union, and your confidence in my future good conduct, in discharging the great responsibilities of the trust confided to me.

Believe me, gentlemen, this expression from men of elevated position, the purity of whose ermine has reflected honor alike on themselves and on their State, and from citizens of well-approved integrity, will be cherished while I exist as the greatest honor of my life.

The short time allowed me since I received notice of my appointment demands every moment I can spare, and forbids my acceptance of your invitation.

I am fully impressed with the great importance of the task assigned me, but I go from this Heaven-favored land with a heart overflowing with gratitude, to the Author of Peace, that there is a hope, even so humble an instrument as I am, may contribute a mite toward a restoration of the blessings of peace to millions of my countrymen. I go with a confidence "that knows no such word as fail," ready, I humbly trust, to do all that becomes a patriot in behalf of his country.

I go to a people long loved by me, for many evidences of confidence, which, though undeserved, were always gratefully remembered, and whose interests, though feebly, were always faithfully served. I go to a people who sustained me in many a hard contest, when I was advocating principles now avowed by you, irrespective of all party associations. I go to a people always patriotic, and as remarkable for their modesty and devotion to the Union, as for patriotism and bravery; to a people whose forefathers, with mine, poured out their blood and treasure to secure the permanence of our institutions; whose forefathers, knowing no sectional prejudices, in leading the way to National Independence, declared, in May, 1775, "that the cause of Boston was the cause of all."

They have always hated secession; always were devoted to the Union, and never freely yielded to evil influences, or consented to a separation, until made to believe, by wicked stratagem, that their own Government had declared war against them. I go to hold out the olive branch of peace on terms such as a man indorsed by you could offer and such as a brave people can honorably accept. With a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, I return, temporarily, to my old home, on a mission of love, to a State among whose citizens I hope I have not a single enemy; whose wide borders contain not a single man to whom it would not afford me pleasure to do a kindness. I return to old friends, whose favors compelled me in the performance of sacred duties, to leave, the heart-corroding cares, and the impoverishment of public service.

Since the day that men were sent forth to preach "glad tidings of great joy to all mankind," has man had a nobler mission than that of one called to aid in restoring unnumbered blessings to millions of his fellow men?

But in leaving friends dear to me, I discharge not only a duty to my native land—to North Carolina, but to California. Though my name would not have been thought of for this honorable trust, had I not brought here the evidences of an honorable discharge from my constituents, in my old home, yet this would have availed nothing, had I been deemed unworthy the confidence of the people of the State of our adoption.

Without the mantle of their approbation I should have now been pursuing the even tenor of my way, in the walks of private life.

To them, and especially to you, my gratitude is due and is sincerely offered.

Believe me, gentlemen, the heart of California, justly proud of the "brilliant achievements of some of her sons," shall not be grieved by any disposition to do my whole duty to our country and to her.

Believe me, I will come back "with my shield, or on my shield."

With the highest respect, very truly yours,
EDW. STANLY.

GEN. BURNSIDE AND C. H. FOSTER.

The Newbern, N. C. Progress publishes the following curious letter:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT NORTH CAROLINA, NEWBERN, April 21, 1862.

Chas. Henry Foster, Esq.

SIR: I see by the Newbern Progress of Saturday morning, that you propose to speak to a political assemblage in this place on Wednesday next, which I think would be very unwise in you to do, and decidedly unwise in me to allow.

You occupy no official political position in the State, as was evinced by the refusal of the House of Representatives to grant you a seat in that body.

The President of the United States has very wisely appointed a Provisional Governor for this State, who is a native thereof, and was at one time, one of its most prominent and influential citizens, and represents at this moment the views and feelings of a majority of the people of the State of North Carolina.

The Government will doubtless indicate its civil policy to Gov. STANLY, and I cannot consent in the meantime to embarrass either him or the Government, by initiating myself or allowing any one else to initiate any civil policy. From my own inexperience in matters of this kind, I am sufficiently embarrassed already in taking note of civil cases that absolutely require immediate attention. The occupation of North Carolina thus far, is entirely military.

Another very serious objection to the assembling of such a meeting as you propose, is, that I have never been informed by any one that it was in contemplation. None of the citizens have represented to me that they desire a meeting of this kind, and officers and soldiers of the army have no right to originate or organize political assemblages.

I beg to say that I do not question the honesty or disinterestedness of your intention, but the wisdom of your course is to me clearly open to criticism, and the meeting cannot be allowed to assemble.

Very respectfully,
(Signed) A. E. BURNSIDE,
Major-General Commanding Department N. C.

THE ADVANCE ON CORINTH.

Gradual Approach of Our Forces to the Rebel Lines.

A SUCCESSFUL RECONNOISANCE.

Gen. Halleck's Headquarters Moved to the Front.

MONTEREY, Monday, May 12.

To-day our pickets took possession of an evacuated rebel camp, three and a half miles from Corinth, and the rebel pickets were driven in.

MONTEREY, Wednesday, May 14.

A reconnoitering party, under Brigadier-General SMITH, had a skirmish with the rebel pickets on our right yesterday, killing two, wounding three and capturing five. Our loss was two. The party went within half a mile of a rebel battery, supported by a brigade of infantry, just outside the intrenchments.

The Commanding General moves his camp, to-day, four miles from here to the front.

Our forces average two and a half to three miles from the intrenchments.

Although the army is advancing slowly, because of the nature of the ground necessitating the building of corduroy roads and bridges, it is generally understood that the engagement will come off in the course of the week.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, May 14.

A special from Cairo to the Tribune says that Gen. MITCHELL'S Division has formed a junction with Gen. POPE, and now forms the extreme left of our line.

A special to the Times says: On Thursday Gen. POPE moved forward his column to retake the position lost in the skirmish of Friday last. The result was not known at the time the steamer left Plittsburgh.

As the steamer Gladiator, with the Fourth Minnesota Regiment on board, was passing Paris Landing, on the Tennessee River, en route for Pittsburgh, her upper works gave way, killing five or six and injuring several others.

CAIRO, Wednesday, May 14.

The latest news from Plittsburgh, says that is not expected that an attack would be made on the enemy's position for several days. Our siege guns are not yet in position.

Gen. HALLECK is still advancing cautiously, carefully, fortifying as he advances. All his movements are predicated, on the supposition that the enemy is in large force at Corinth, and that he intends making a stand.

Grand Junction is being fortified by Gen. BEAUREGARD, with the evident intention of falling back there, if beaten at Corinth. The number of the enemy's troops is estimated, at Gen. HALLECK'S headquarters, at from 120,000 to 170,000.

THE LAST NAVAL BATTLE.

Particulars of the Brilliant Engagement Above Fort Pillow.

The Victory of Our Gunboats Complete.

Correspondence of the Chicago Times.

OFF FORT PILLOW, Saturday, May 10, via CAIRO, Sunday, May 11.

At last the monotony is broken. We have had a fight and a glorious one, too, purely naval, with nearly an equal number of boats on each side, and have sent the rebels back down the river badly crippled. They attacked us this morning at 6 o'clock, and before eight they were so badly whipped that they will never again attempt such a job.

Yesterday morning they sent a boat up with a flag of truce, ostensibly to arrange an exchange of two surgeons captured at the battle of Belmont, but, as now appears, simply to ascertain definitely the position of our fleet.

Early this morning, as usual, our mortarboats were towed down to their position for firing, it being a point on the Arkansas shore about one mile from the end of Craigshead Point. The gunboat Cincinnati ran down as a convoy.

Scarcely had the mortars been moored in their position, when the rebel ram Louisiana appeared coming around the point, accompanied by four other gunboats. The ram immediately opened fire on the Cincinnati, to which the latter replied with interest. The rebel boats were all held in check by the Cincinnati alone, when the rest of the Federal fleet got under way and came to her assistance.

In the meantime the rebel ram, finding her guns ineffectual against the iron armor of the Cincinnati, approached her with the evident intention of running her down. Capt. STEMBEL, of the latter, prepared to meet the assault of the ram by opening his steam batteries and putting them in readiness for use.

As the rebel craft approached within close range, the Cincinnati turned her head about, causing the ram to run along close beside her, when Capt. STEMBEL drew his pistol and very coolly shot the pilot, killing him instantly; but, a second afterwards, a musket ball struck the gallant Captain in his left shoulder, inflicting a painful, though not serious, wound.

At this time the contest between the two boats was most intensely exciting. The claws of each were armed with carbines, cutlasses and boarding-pikes, and were discharging volley after volley in quick succession at each other; while the ram was also endeavoring to get her head about so as to run into, and, if possible, sink her antagonist.

Just then the steam batteries of the Cincinnati were opened with terrible effect, throwing heavy volumes of steam and scalding water in the midst of the rebel crew, placing all who appeared on deck hors du combat instantly, and causing the craft to withdraw with all haste.

In the meantime the rebel fleet had been reinforced by three other vessels, and among them the new iron-clad gunboat Mallory, lately built at Memphis. These three ran immediately up to the Cincinnati, and engaged her at once. She withstood the assault most nobly, the shot of the enemy glancing off from her iron plating without causing she slightest damage, while her own guns were raining shot and shell with fearful effect upon the enemy.

Capt. STEMBEL, though badly wounded, remained at his post and directed every movement with the coolness and deliberation for which he is noted.

During this engagement the Mallory approached the Cincinnati with the design of accomplishing that which the ram had failed in doing. As she came in close proximity the Federal boat St. Louis bore down upon her, and coming with a full head of steam on, struck her amidships, cutting her nearly in two, and causing her to sink in a very few minutes. Numbers of her crew escaped by clinging to the St. Louis, and others were picked up by the Cincinnati, but the larger proportion went down with the boat.

While this work was in progress the other boats of our fleet had engaged the remainder of the rebel fleet, and a most terrific battle was raging, the like of which the usually peaceful waters of the Mississippi has never before witnessed.

Report followed upon report, like the continuous rattle of musketry. The rebels fought bravely and with determination, but they were met by greater bravery, skill and metal, and were being badly worsted.

Capt. DAVIS, on the flagship Benton, directed every movement of our fleet with the sagacity and style of a veteran in naval warfare. He made no mistakes. Not a boat was moved but with fearful effect upon the enemy. Did the Carondelet put her bows up stream, it was to let fly her stern guns; did the Benton turn about, it was that a broadside might give its destruction to the foe.

The Mound City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, and the old war-horse Benton, were each and all diligent and effective, while the Conestoga, wooden, lay off at a safe distance, and made good use of her long range guns.

The cannonading was fearful, and its reverberations were most grand and terrible. The roar was almost like one continuous report, while the broad river was covered with a dense volume of smoke that for a time completely enveloped both fleets and hid them from view. It was at this time that a report, louder and more distant than that of a gun, attracted general attention, and when the smoke lifted a little it was found that one of the enemy's boats was blown to atoms.

I have no means of knowing the loss of life by this terrible casualty, but it must have been very great. A few lucky fellows were seen floating about on fragments of the wreck, and were picked up by the rebel boats, but the majority of the rebel crew perished miserably.

Scarcely had the excitement caused by this fearful and unlooked-for event passed away, when a second report startled all ears, and another rebel boat with its crew had disappeared. Both vessels were blown up by the explosion of shells from our gunboats' magazines. All this time our boats continued to pour their deadly rounds into the enemy, crippling each of their craft as were not wholly destroyed, and carrying death to hundreds of their crews. While themselves unhurt, they proudly defied the heaviest broadsides of the rebel guns, their invulnerable armor and sloping sides repelling shot and shell with perfect success; no enemy could stand against such extreme and destructive fire as our boats continued to give, while their own guns were impotent for mischief; much less in their crippled condition, with three of their eight boats destroyed, could the rebels maintain their ground.

At 7:30 they withdrew to the shelter of their batteries.

The casualties on our side were scarcely worth mentioning. Capt. STEMBEL was slightly wounded in his left shoulder, and two seamen were injured, though to what extent is not known.

Our gunboats behaved most admirably, and all of them came out of the action without any serious damage.

When the engagement closed, the gunboats returned to their several positions, and their crews prepared their breakfasts as though nothing unusual had happened.

To do justice in the way of credit to our officers engaged in this affair, would require the mention of all, but I cannot forbear speaking of the efficiency and signal abilities of Capt. DAVIS, the Acting Flag officer, nor of the coolness and determined bravery of Capt. STEMBEL.

ANOTHER ATTACK EXPECTED.

CAIRO, Wednesday, May 14.

A dispatch from Fort Wright, dated yesterday at noon, says that a rebel tug has this moment rounded the Point to reconnoitre everything, which seems to indicate renewed activity. Both sides were expecting an attack momentarily.

A deserter came on board the flagboat Benton yesterday. He states that the rebel ram in the engagement Saturday was not sunk, as reported, but was terribly shattered. Our gunners undoubtedly fired most of their shots above the water line. They struck where the ram was heavily plated. Experienced naval men are of the opinion that had the same number of shots been fired at the water line, or below, they would have sent every rebel craft to the bottom. The deserter reported that the rebel fleet lay off the fort, busily engaged in repairing the damages, promising faithfully to return in exactly 48 hours.

GEN. HALLECK'S ARMY.

The Passage of the Tennessee—Gen. Pope's Army—Marks of the Battle—Sensation Stories—Relics of the Field—Consequences of a Change in Command.

From Our Own Correspondent.

IN THE WOODS BETWEEN CORINTH AND PITTSBURGH LANDING, Saturday, April 26, 1862.

The above superscription may seem somewhat formidable in regard to length, but it is the only one that will convey even an approximate idea of the army and your correspondent's locality. "In the woods," means about six miles from Pittsburgh, and five miles from Hamburgh—the latter, a beautiful little town on the west bank of the Tennessee River, and at present the headquarters of Gen. POPE.

I reached here day before yesterday, being indebted to Capt. JEWETT WILCOX, of the steamer Platte Valley, for transportation from Cairo. As Capt. WILCOX is a strong admirer of the TIMES, and a good fellow, withal, I have taken the liberty to give his name the benefit of an insertion.

The gradual change from the leafless trees and bare prairies of Illinois to the heavy foliage and grassy slopes of Tennessee, was pleasing beyond all expression. Here everything is in full leaf and blossom, the heavy green of the one and the mingled purple and snowy white of the other meets you everywhere. The gardens at Hamburgh are radiant with full-blown roses, the woods are filled with the fragrance and beauty of clustering blossoms.

So much for the difference between the Sucker State and this beautiful country—in the one a heavy snow-storm pelting the naked trees, in the other nature decked in her daintiest robes and her choicest jewels.

It has heretofore been sedulously withheld from the public that Gen. POPE had moved from New-Madrid to this place, but probably ere this events have ripened to an extent that will not necessitate being contraband, information relative to his movements. I found Gen. POPE at Hamburgh, having, together with his staff, taken possession of the most commodious and aristocratic houses in the place. In other places of greater pretensions, these houses would hardly be considered as first-class, as they are built of logs, and are but one story in height; yet as the logs are hewn, the sides whitewashed, while the yards are full of rose-bushes, fruit-trees of every variety—many of the latter being in full bloom—the buildings present a very comfortable and pretty appearance, and are much superior to the average of houses in the State.

I may say here that perhaps there never was an army which very greatly exceeded in excellency that of Gen. POPE, and perfect order reigns in every department, and include the most momentous operations as well as the minutest details. Gen. POPE, as everybody knows, is a most accomplished officer, and is ably seconded by the very flower of the Western army. Among the latter I noticed many of the officers who shared the brilliancy and hardships of Gen. LYON'S campaign—such as STANLEY, GRANGER, PLUMMER, LOREROP, KELLEY, (the hero of Dug Springs,) and many others. SCHUYLER HAMILTON, of New-York, is also there, and occupies a prominent position in the army of the advance.

Gen. POPE'S forces extend from the land along the road in the direction of Corinth; those of Gen. HALLECK are posted some four miles further down the river, and occupy the country between Pittsburgh Landing and Corinth for a distance of half a dozen miles west from the Landing.

After spending a few hours in admiring the soldierly appearance of the encampments at Hamburgh, I bestrode a mule—once the property of JEFF. THOMPSON—and started on a visit to the main army.

The day was beautiful, and the roads as fine as any ever traversed by a 2:40 horse. A mile or so from Hamburgh the road crosses Lick Creek, which has been bridged, but a little further is another bayou, whose depth being greater than the average height of my mule, led to some swimming and splashing, that were doubtless more diverting to a party of loungers on the opposite bank than to the parties more directly interested. A mile or so from this crossing the road reaches into the country through which raged the conflict of the 6th.

Further description of things, as seen here, will doubtless be stale ere this can reach you, yet in spite of all I had read, everything was at once novel and of the most intense interest. Had one not having heard of the battle been transported to this portion of the country, he could have read almost every incident of the desperate fight written in unmistakable characters upon every tree and bush, and upon every rod of earth for miles around.

Nature never wrote her own history upon her tablet rocks more plainly than the battle of Pittsburgh is written upon the ravines, trees any hillsides that extend for miles back from the river. The fierce hurricane of war that swept over the ground has rolled up the graveyard billows till they lie thicker than the waves upon the ocean in a storm.

In one tree I counted one hundred and forty bullet marks which extended from the roots to a height of sixty to one hundred feet. Underbrush is mowed off by the acre as completely as if done by the sythe—huge trees are splintered as riven by thunderbolts—everything, even to the smallest bush, is scarred and torn by bullet marks. Within ah area of five miles not less than 3,500 bodies have been buried since the battle, and to this numbers are being daily added, such as die in the various hospitals.

Here let me say a word in regard to some outrageous sensational reports which have lately appeared in various daily papers. Among other horrifying lies which have been published, I noticed in a Western daily the following:

"Mile after mile we met the same graveyard atmosphere, and occasionally a head appeared from some rude mound, or a limb, rigid and slightly corrupted, was thrust into view."

This is but one of a dozen similar "sensations", which appear in the same letter, and which is dated at Pittsburgh twelve days after the fight.

Now, it will hardly be believed that this infernal specimen of "reliable correspondence" is all gotten up simply for the purpose of giving prominence to the paper in which such letters are published! Yet such is the case; the whole assertion is unqualifiedly false—false as the heart is bereft of human sympathy which could bear to inflict such a cruel blow upon the wives and mothers of those who fell at Pittsburgh. What must be the tortures of those whose dear relatives are left upon this bloody battle-field, as they read such nauseating articles, and reflect that their friends are rotting like dead dogs in a place where their devotion and courage entitle them to such monuments as are given to heroes?

I have spent three days in examining the whole field. I think there is not an acre that I have not been over carefully, and have never seen one single instance such as is related above. Friend and foe have alike been given as decent burial as is ever given to the dead of the battle-field—rude and rough enough, God knows, for the dear remains of loved ones—yet, in every case, quite as good as circumstances and the tenderest humanity could provide. Lest my own observations should be insufficient, I have added to them those of dozens of others who are fully familiar with every feature of the battle-ground, and they, too, deny the truthfulness of any such assertions as that given above. If the hearts of any have been pained by reading accounts of this character, let me assure them that the assertions are as void of truth as the breast of the writers are of feeling.

That the heads of mules and horses are sometimes exposed, is true, but I will stake my veracity and honor upon the truth of the assertion that every word of the lines above quoted, is cruelly and meanly false. Should a little more of this "correspondence" be written at the place it purports to be, instead of hundreds of miles away, as it frequently is, the public would be much better informed in relation to what occurs.

In roaming about the woods I found a well-worn letter, whose contents may prove of interest. It is dated:

DUBUQUE, Iowa, July 1, 1861.

DEAR HUNTER:—By this I introduce to you my friend, DANIEL O. C. QUIGLY, of this town, and believe he will prove himself worthy of your friendship. With every wish for your prosperity and happiness, your friend CHARLES D. JONES.

To Capt. S. E. HUNTER, HUNTER'S Rifles, Clinton, La.

The peculiarities of this document consist in the fact that the writer is a son of Gen. GEO. W. JONES, of Dubuque, (late Minister to Bogota, Fort Lafayette, &c.,) and a brother of the Lieut. JONES who was bagged at Fort Henry. The QUIGLEY spoken of, is a son of a prominent citizen of Dubuque, and one who, soon after the war commenced, bolted to the South and offered his services to the scoundrels who are trying to break up this Government. I offer the letter for publication from the fact that the writer now lives in Dubuque, and pretends, as he ever has pretended since the war began, to be loyal. How far such loyalty will be tolerated by a Government whose burdens are already heavy enough, should be tested. The letter was given, and for a treasonable purpose, at a time when the gallant LYON was struggling against the traitorous uprisings in Missouri—at a time when hundreds of JONES' townsmen in the First Iowa, were toiling and suffering beneath the burning sun of Missouri, inspired only by motives of patriotism, by a wish to preserve intact their beloved Constitution—it was at such a time that JONES chose to perpetrate his treason and assist in the work of breaking up the Government.

I need not detail all the things I saw and found on the battle-field, as repeated description has made everything familiar to the public. Within the last few days, various divisions of Gen. HALLECK'S army have taken up advanced positions, till now, when the lines present a front varying from six to ten miles from the river, and as I learn, the arrangements which now prevail are vastly different from those which existed prior to the arrival of Gen. HALLECK. The strictest sanitary regulations are enforced—things in all cases are now ordered, not recommended, as they were formerly, and in consequence, everything is now attended to with promptness. Drills are frequent and thorough; the men are improving in health and spirits, while their courage rises in proportion as they find they are being handled by a soldier.

The men have entirely recovered from this "spoiling for a fight," which is invariably assumed to be an attendant of their entrance to the field. They have learned that a battle is a dread reality, and not a pastime—that it involves the fearful consequences of suffering and death—that the enemy are not contemptible "secesh," but strong, earnest, determined men, led by Generals of profound sagacity and eminent ability. Knowing these things they are better prepared for the issues which must be met—and they will meet them like sober thinking men—men who appreciate their task, who have full confidence in themselves, their cause, and their leaders.

I find that many of the Cairo correspondents dating their letters from this point, have intentionally or otherwise, done great injustice to many regiments, and particularly the Sixteenth Iowa. It is said that when brought into action they threw down their arms and ran away without firing a shot. This is a base slander upon the materials of a most gallant and efficient regiment. The Sixteenth was brought upon the field Sunday morning, and for the first time arms were put in their hands and ammunition distributed. There were not twenty privates in the command who knew whether a cartridge went powder or ball first into the musket—they were, in short, as raw in drill as if they were a miscellaneous crowd just selected from the sidewalks of a city.

In view of all these disadvantages, they held their position for an hour and forty minutes, losing 28 killed and about 100 wounded. Being then partially flanked, they fell back, in obedience to orders—a portion in good order, others in considerable confusion. They, however, were rallied on a new line, which they occupied Sunday night and held on Monday, their services that day not being required. Their heavy loss indicates that they were well in the battle; if they ran away, then, so did many other regiments in the field. Portions of many regiments ran back—they were obliged to do it frequently when the enemy were closing in on their rear; nor do they deny it—nor are they thought cowardly for having done it.

Operations, with a view to future movements are of daily occurrence. The country is being thoroughly examined, maps drawn, roads and bridges constructed, heavy reconnoissances being made, all with a view to a movement, which, when it is made, will be made not blindly but understandingly. Occasional skirmishes occur between these parties and scouting bands of the enemy, but with no serious results.

To-day, the following order was read before all the regiments:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT MISSISSIPPI, April 25, 1862.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 21.—The Major-General Commanding announces, with deep regret, to the troops of this Department, the death of Maj. CHAS. F. SMITH, who, at 4 o'clock P. M., to-day, departed this life, at Savanna, on the Tennessee River. Gen. SMITH has been in the service of his country for more than forty years, and has passed through all the military grades, from cadet to Major-General.

He fought with distinction in nearly all the battles of Mexico, and, by his gallantry and skill, gained imperishable laurels at the siege of Fort Donelson.

He combined the qualities of a faithful officer and an excellent disciplinarian, an able commander, and a modest, courteous gentleman. In his death the army has lost one of its brightest ornaments, and the country a General whose place it will be difficult to fill.

By command. Maj. Gen. HALLECK.

GALWAY.

A Sabbath in Camp—Monterey and its Surroundings—Relics of the Battle—Our Forces Advancing—The Opposing Armies—Gen. Halleck in the Front.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MONTEREY, Tenn., Sunday, May 4, 1862.

Here we are, at the close of what, in other places, is the "Holy Sabbath," but which here, is nothing more than a very disagreeable, rainy day. Ever since daylight, the windows of heaven have been opened, and the rain has been pouring down upon us as it did during the forty days which inaugurated the grand hydropathic treatment to which universal mankind was subjected—greatly, it is to be hoped, to their moral as well as personal purification. Could the few inhabitants of this portion of Tennessee, and particularly the wives and daughters of the chivalry, be subjected to a similar process of cleansing, it would be of incalculable benefit, for a dirtier, and at the same time, a more rebellious set, I have nowhere seen.

Close to the edge of the town of Monterey is a log-house of the "saddle-bag" order of architecture, in which are confined seven women and three men, all of whom are residents of this neighborhood, and who were cooped up for the purpose of preventing their giving information to the enemy. The "ladies" are tolerably fair [specimens of physical health, but as nasty in personal appearance as it is possible to imagine. Each steadied an old clay pipe in her mouth with her left hand, while the right, at short intervals, sought the depths of her hair for a purpose well known to Russians and Digger Indians. The only variation to this interesting operation, would be an occasional removal of the pipe in order that its fair possessor might spit, or give utterance to a long-drawn sigh, as mile after mile of Yankees filed by the house, affording them uncomfortable forebodings of the probable fate of their husbands, all of whom are with BEAUREGARD, at Corinth.

It is here, as I have always found it elsewhere in Southern States, since the war began. The poorer a man is, the more on a "rampage" he gets, as he reflects that this war was commenced by the Yankees for the single purpose of stealing "our niggers," and particularly is this the case, if he owns no "nigger," at all, or else his proprietorship is limited to the possession of a single superannuated old darkey—the heir-loom and seal patent to aristocracy of three generations—whose actual cash value does not amount to ten cents.

Monterey is a small town on the road from Pittsburgh Landing to Corinth, and is about 12 miles from the former place and 10 from the latter. The town is in McNairy County, and within some four miles of the Mississippi State line. The town itself is of no great importance, consisting simply of one good residence and a dozen log-houses of the meanest description,—all of which are inhabited, or were, by people whose character resembles nothing in the world so much as the tenements they occupy. Ignorant to the last degree, they are but little different from a fifth-rate tribe of Indians, save in the respect that they believe themselves the superiors of all the world, and particularly the Yankees, in everything that relates to intelligence, chivalry and gallantry.

The one good house is owned by an affluent planter, who possesses a "right smart lot of niggers"—as one of the ladies under guard informed me—and who some time since shipped his colored chattels to the more Southern portions of Dixie. He had a large crop of cotton, which he disposed of, with the exception of some forty bales, before the arrival of our forces. The balance he concealed in the woods at once, for the purpose of preserving it from the torches of the rebels and the grasp of the Yankees. In the one respect he was successful; in the other he made a signal failure. To-day I was perambulating the woods hereabouts, and, at the distance of a mile or so from the house, came to a secluded ravine, in which was the cotton, surrounded by National bayonets.

The house itself is now occupied by Gen. HALLECK as his headquarters, the family having left for a more genial country.

Our road to this point leads over that taken by the rebels in their advance upon and retreat from Pittsburgh Landing on the memorable 6th and 7th of April. Some six miles from the Landing, the pursuit on the part of the National troops having ceased, the rebels commenced the work of examining and disposing of the plunder captured from our forces.

From that point to this the road is strewn with broken trunks, carpet sacks and other articles whose character would not allow of their being profitably carried away. Prominent among the things left are articles of clothing once belonging to the rebels, and of which they had stripped themselves in order to put on those plundered from our camps.

A close observer can read in these cast-off pantaloons, shirts and coats, a very prominent chapter in the character of the rebellion. In the old shoes with toes gaping like an open-mouthed crocodile, in the pantaloons which long since ceased to afford the protection which a due attention to comfort and modesty imperatively requires, in coats threadbare, minus tails, filled with holes in which mud and weather found their entrance at pleasure, in the blankets filthy to the last degree, stiff with dirt and fairly alive with vermin, one can readily discover much which leads to logical inferences relative to the resources, cleanliness and other characteristics of the South.

It is easy to imagine the luxurious sensations experienced by the chivalry as they peeled themselves of their rotten habiliments, and enveloped their noble frames with that, to them, unknown article, clean shirts. What feelings of soft, delicious enjoyment must have trilled along the currents of their aristocratic blood, as they, for the first time since the rebellion commenced, found themselves wrapped in garments at once soft, comfortable and clean!

This place is the one upon which Gen. POPE advanced last Tuesday, reaching here in time to give the rear guard of the rebels an acquaintance with the qualities of his artillery practices. As I learn from residents, the rebels commenced leaving here Monday evening, labored all night, and managed to leave one side of the town just as POPE entered the other.

Being situated upon a high country, which commands a wide view in every direction, possessing plenty of good water and easy of access, this place has always been a favorite camping ground of the rebels. In every direction may be seen marks of their occupancy—old papers, cast-off clothing, tent ditches, the well-polished bones of swine and cattle, barrels of spoiled beef, the whole covering the country in every direction for miles.

In one building, which has apparently been occupied as headquarters by some officer, there were found in the garret the remains or a portion of the remains of a man. The skull had been pitched out in the back yard, the bones of one leg lay in close proximity to the head, the balance of the frame, with some of the flesh still adhering, was found in the garret.

Who the individual was is not known. On the wall, written with a pencil, along with many allusions to "Old ABE," coupled with adjectives of more force than decency, is the sentence "Poor al go has gon up." Whether this refers to the gentleman distributed around the backyard and up stairs, or has some other occult meaning, is more than I can at present tell.

Iowa seems to be furnishing material for both North and South. Among the old papers found here is the muster-roll of Capt. FRANK WHICHER'S company of the C. S. Army. WHICHER is from Muscatine, Iowa, where his father, a prominent jurist of Iowa, not long since died, and where the balance of the family still resides.

The torrents of blood which Iowa shed at Wilson's Creek, Blue Mills, Belmont, Donelson, and Shiloh, will a thousand times compensate for the stigma which may be attached to her for having, here and there, furnished an occasional scoundrel to swell the ranks of the taltorous South.

After possessing himself of this place, Gen. POPE moved six miles south to a point on the road running between Hamburg and Corinth. BUELL'S army moved up on his right, and was followed yesterday by GRANT, whose divisions are now ranged on the right of BUELL. Yesterday afternoon, POPE advanced two and a half miles on the Corinth road, and routed a strong advance of the enemy, posted at a little place called Farmington. A heavy cannonading from that direction, which lasted an hour or so, showed that the conflict was sharp. Its results are not known here yet, further than that the rebels were driven out and the point occupied by Gen. POPE. This brings him now within seven miles of Corinth. If BEAUREGARD intends to fight the conflict cannot be long delayed.

Gen. THOMAS has been placed second in command to Gen. GRANT. T. W. SHERMAN takes THOMAS' old division, leaving Gen. MCKEAN, of Iowa, in command of his original division, the Sixth. The remnants of the Second, Eighth, Twelfth and Fourteenth Iowa, and the Fifty-eighth Illinois Regiments, have been put together, forming a command known as the Union Brigade, under charge of Lieut.-Col. BAKER, formerly of the Iowa Second. The divisions of MCCLERNAND, WALLACE, CRITTENDEN and HAMILTON are constituted the army of the reserve—the last-named on the left, the others on the right—under command of Major-Gen. JOHN A. MCCLERNAND, of Illinois. These are about the only changes of importance that have occurred within a short time, and will probably remain permanent.

Gen. HALLECK, yesterday, left his camp at the Landing, and came out here to take the field in person. Dressed in an old slouched hat, Quaker-like in his other attire, he came along through a pelting rain, looking as unlike a great General as well-could be. His presence seems to excite the utmost confidence in the armies—they will go into this fight with vastly different feelings from those with which they struggled against the surprise of the 6th of April.

From this point, running south, is a ridge, along and behind which are encamped the National armies. Three miles west, and running parallel with this ridge, is another, on which is encamped the advance of BEAUREGARD. With the naked eye we can discern their tents, and occasional squads of horsemen, in the open spaces among the trees. GALWAY.

IMPORTANT DECISION IN ADMIRALTY.

The Question of Jurisdiction over Liens on Vessels under State Laws Settled.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Lewis H. Meyer and Edwin Stucken, Claimants of the Steamer St. Lawrence, her Tackle, &c., Appellants, vs. William W. Tupper and Edward R. Wilcox.

Mr. Chief Justice TANEY delivered the opinion of the Court.

This is an appeal from the decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New-York, sitting as a Court of Admiralty.

The case, as presented by the transcript, is this: The appellees, in the Summer and Fall of 1855, were requested by John Graham, the owner of the steamer St. Lawrence, who resided in New-York, to make sundry repairs to the vessel, and to furnish materials for that purpose. The steamboat was then lying in the harbor of New-York, which was her home port. The libel states that at the time these repairs were made, and materials found, the laws of New-York gave them a lien for the amount on the vessel; and they pray that the steamer may be condemned and sold to satisfy their claim. The application for process against the vessel was founded upon the 12th rule of admiralty practice, prescribed by this Court in 1844, (3 How.,) which authorized this mode of proceeding, where the local law gave a lien upon the vessel for supplies or repairs in a domestic port. This rule was altered at December Term, 1858, and process in rem denied to the party unless a lien was given by the maritime law. The alteration took effect on the 1st of May, 1859, (21 How.,) and the libel in this case was filed while the former rule was still in force.

There is no question as to the amount due, the proctor for the claimants having assented to the report of the Commissioners. But the claimants allege in their answer, that these materials were furnished and repairs made upon the personal credit of Graham, and that the libelants accounted with him, and took his notes for the amount after the work was done. They allege, further, that they afterwards purchased the vessel from Graham in good faith, and without notice of this claim; and insist, that as the lien claimed is not created by the maritime law, but solely by a statute of New-York, it cannot be enforced in a Court of Admiralty, because a statute of a State cannot enlarge the jurisdiction of a Court of the United States.

With reference to the last mentioned objection, it may be proper to notice it, more particularly as it is founded upon a misconception of the object and effect of the rules above mentioned.

The objection is founded upon the assumption, that these rules involve a question as to the extent of the admiralty jurisdiction granted by the Constitution. And as the Court could not, consistently with its duty, refuse to exercise a power with which it was clothed by the Constitution and laws, the appellants insist that the alteration made by the rule in 1858, must be regarded as an admisston that the Court had fallen into error when it adopted the rule of 1844, and had exercised a jurisdiction beyond its legitimate boundary; and if the Admiralty Court had not the right to enforce a State lien in a case of this kind, the rule then in force could not enlarge its jurisdiction, nor authorize the decree of the Circuit Court which supported and enforced this lien.

The argument would be unanswerable, if the alteration related to jurisdiction; for the Court could not, consistently with its duty, refuse to exercise a power which the Constitution and law had clothed it, when its aid was invoked by a party who was entitled to demand it as a matter of right.

But there is a wide difference between the power of the Court upon a question of jurisdiction and its authority over its mode of proceeding and process. And the alteration in the rules applies altogether to the character of the process to be used in certain cases, and has no relation to the question of jurisdiction.

Judicial power, in all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, is delegated by the Constitution to the Federal Government in general terms, and Courts of this character had then been established in all commercial and maritime nations, differing, however, materially in different countries, in the powers and duties confided to them, the extent of the jurisdiction conferred depending very much upon the character of the Government in which they were created. And this circumstance, with the general terms of the grant, rendered it difficult to define the exact limits of its power in the United States.

This difficulty was increased by the complex character of our Government, where separate and distinct specified powers of sovereignty are exercised by the United States and a State, independently of each other, within the same territorial limits. And the reports of the decisions of this Court will show, that the subject has often been before it, and carefully considered, without being able to fix with precision its definite boundaries. But certainly no State law can enlarge it, nor can an act of Congress or rule of Court make it broader than the judicial power may determine to be its true limits. And this boundary is to be ascertained by a reasonable and just construction of the words used in the Constitution, taken in connection with the whole instrument, and the purposes for which admiralty and maritime jurisdiction was granted to the Federal Government.

Yet Congress may undoubtedly prescribe the forms and mode of proceeding in the judicial tribunals it establishes to carry this power into execution; and may authorize the court to proceed by an attachment against the property, or by the arrest of the person, as the Legislature shall deem most expedient to promote the purposes of justice.

A brief history of the legislation of Congress upon this subject will explain the grounds upon which the rule of 1844 was adopted, and also the reason that induced the court to change it; and will also show that no question of jurisdiction was supposed to be involved in the adoption of the original rule, nor in the change that was afterward made.

After the passage of the judiciary act of 1789, Congress, at the same session, passed the act prescribing the process to be used in the different Courts it had just established, (1 Stat., 93;) and by that act directed that in the Courts of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction the forms and modes of proceeding should be according to the course of the civil law.

This act left no discretionary power in the Admiralty Courts, or in the Supreme Court, in relation to the modes and forms of proceeding. And it is evident that if the Courts of Admiralty in this country used the process in rem, or process by attachment of the property, in all cases in which it was authorized in countries governed by the civil law, it would unavoidably in some cases come in collision with the common law Courts of the State where the parties resided, and where the property was situated, and where other parties besides the owners or builders or equippers of the ship might have an interest in, or a claim upon, the property, which they had a right to assert in the Courts of the State.

But this difficulty was soon seen and removed. And by the act of May 8, 1792, (1 Stat., 275,) these forms and modes of proceeding are to be according to the principles, rules, and usages which belong to Courts of Admiralty, as contradistinguished from Courts of common law. And these forms and modes of proceeding are made subject to such alterations and additions as the respective Courts might deem expedient, "or to such regulations as the Supreme Court of the United States shall think proper from time to time by rule to prescribe to any Circuit or District Court concerning the same." And the power here conferred upon this Court was afterward enlarged by the act of Aug. 23, 1842.

It was under the authority of these two acts that the rule of which we are now speaking was made in 1844; and afterward, by virtue of the same authority, altered by the rule adopted at December term, 1858.

It was manifestly proper, and perhaps necessary, that this power should be confided to the Court; for it being the province of this Court to determine what cases came within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, its process and mode of proceeding in such cases should be so framed as to avoid collision with the State authorities, where rights of property were involved, over which the State had a right to legislate, without trespassing upon the authority of the General Government. The power was therefore given to the Court, not only to make rules upon this subject, but to make them from time to time, so that if any new difficulty should arise it might be promptly obviated, and the modes of proceeding and the process of the Admiralty Courts so moulded as to accomplish that object.

The case of the Gen. Smith (4 Wheat., 438) was decided upon these principles, and the right to proceed against the property regarded as a mere question of process and not of jurisdiction. And the Court held that where, upon the principles of the maritime code, the supplies are presumed to be furnished on the credit of the vessel, or where a lien is given by the local law, the party is entitled to proceed in rem, in the Admiralty Court to enforce it; but where the supplies are presumed by the maritime code to be furnished on the personal credit of the owner or master, and the local law gives him no lien, although the contract is maritime, yet he must seek his remedy against the person, and not against the vessel. In either case, the contract is equally within the jurisdiction of a Court of Admiralty. And it is obvious, from this decision, that the Court considered the process in rem or priority given for repairs or supplies to a domestic vessel by the Courts of Admiralty, in those countries where the principles of the civil law have been adopted, as forming no part of the general maritime code, but as local laws, and therefore furnishing no precedent for similar cases where the local law is otherwise; consequently they form no part of the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction conferred on the Government of the United States. This case was decided in 1819, and has always since been followed and regarded as a leading one in the Admiralty Courts. Its authority was recognized in the cases of Peyroux vs. Howard, 7 Pet., 324; and the New-Orleans vs. Phœbus, 11 Pet., 275, and in others to which it is unnecessary to refer. And while process against the vessel was denied in the case of the Gen. Smith, because the law of Maryland gave no lien or priority, it was used and supported in the case of Peyroux vs. Howard—a similar case—upon the ground that the party had a lien on the vessel by the law of Louisiana, and as the contract was within its jurisdiction, it ought to give him all the rights he had acquired under it; yet, certainly, the Court never supposed that the Admiralty jurisdiction was broader in Louisiana than in Maryland.

When this Court framed the rules in 1844, it, of course, adhered to the practice adopted in the previous cases, and by the 12th rule authorized the process in rem where the party was entitled to a lien under the local or State law. But in the rules then adopted, this rule as well as the others are explicitly adopted as "a rule of practice," and, consequently, liable to be altered from time to time, whenever it was found to be inconvenient, or likely to embarrass the legitimate business of the Court. And there could be no embarrassing difficulties in using the ordinary process in rem, of the civil law, if the State law gave the lien in general terms, without specific conditions or limitations inconsistent with the rules and principles which governed implied maritime liens; and whenever this was the case, the process to enforce it promoted the convenience and facilities of trade and navigation by the promptness of its proceedings. It disposed at once of the whole controversy, without subjecting the party to the costs and delay of a proceeding in the chancery or common law courts of the State, to obtain the benefit of his lien, if he failed to obtain satisfaction in his suit against the person in the Court of Admiralty.

The State lien, however, was enforced, not as a right which the court was bound to carry into execution upon the application of the party, but as a discretionary power, which the court might lawfully exercise for the purposes of justice, where it did not involve controversies beyond the limits of admiralty jurisdiction. In many of the States, however, the laws were found not to harmonize with the principles and rules of the maritime code. Certain conditions and forms of proceeding are usually required to obtain the lien, and it is generally declared forfeited or regarded as waived after the lapse of a certain time, or upon some future contingency. These conditions and limitations differ in different States, and if the process in rem is used wherever the local law gives the lien, it will subject the Admiralty Court to the necessity of examining and expounding the varying lien laws of every State, and of carrying them into execution, and that, too, in controversies where the existence of the lien is denied, and the right depends altogether on a disputed construction of a State statute, or, indeed, in some cases of conflicting claims under statutes of different States, when the vessel has formerly belonged to the port of another State, and become subject to a lien there by the State law.

Such duties and powers are appropriate to the Courts of the State which created the lien, and are entirely alien to the purposes for which the admiralty power was created, and form no part of the code of laws which it was established to administer.

Moreover, cases may, and indeed have arisen, where a third party claimed a lien prior and superior to that of the libelant under the provisions of a State statute. And where such a controversy arises in a proceeding in rem, the Admiralty Court clearly has not power to decide it and adjust the priorities in dispute, and would be compelled to abandon and recall its process whenever the controversy assumed that shape.

The proceeding, therefore, in rem, upon the ground that the local law gave the lien, where none was given by the maritime code, was found upon experience to be inapplicable to our mixed form of Government. It was found to be inconvenient in most cases, and absolutely impracticable in others, and the rule which sanctioned it was therefore repealed. And the repealing rule provided that the new rule should not go into operation until the day named in it, because it would have been unjust to those who had already proceeded under the rule of 1844, or might institute proceedings under it before they were aware of the alteration, to subject them to costs and delay by a sudden and unexpected change of a rule of practice.

The case before us was commenced before the change in the rule; and, as there was an undoubted lien acquired under the State law, we think the Court had a right to enforce it upon the principles above stated, since no provision of the New-York Statute, as far as it effected the case, was inconsistent with a maritime lien; and the execution of the process involved no inquiries beyond the legitimate authority of the Court.

The remaining question is, has this lien been forfeited or waived? It does not appear to have been forfeited or waived under any provison in the New-York Statute, nor was it waived upon the principle of maritime law by the acceptance of Graham's notes, unless the claimants can show that the libelants agreed to receive them in lieu of and in place of their original claim. The notes, in this instance, have been surrendered, and were filed in the proceedings in the District Court. And the language of the Court in the case of Ramsay vs. Allegre, 12 Wheat., 611, and of Judge Story in commenting upon that case in 3d How., 573, necessarily imply that if the notes had been surrendered, the party would have a right to stand upon his original contract, and to seek his remedy in the forum to which it originally belonged as fully as if the notes had never been given.

In this case the proof is positive, by the testimony of a witness who was present at the time the notes were given, that it was understood by the parties that they were not to discharge or affect his lien, and that the vessel was to continue liable for his claim as before. And although the respondents appear to have purchased without notice of this incumbrance, their want of caution in this respect cannot deprive the libelants of a legal right, which they have done nothing to forfeit.

The decree of the Circuit Court is therefore affirmed, with costs.

Custom in this Port in Respect to the Delivery of Bills of Lading.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Ingraham, Leonard, and Rosenkrans.

Benjamin Blossom et al. vs. Edward Champion et al.—This was an action to recover for detention of personal property. The plaintiff contracted to sell to F. A. Blossom, 843 barrels of spirits of turpentine, for cash on delivery. F. A. Blossom sold to Albert Woodhull. Defendant, Champion, was the master of the ship Victoria. Plaintiffs sent the spirits of turpentine on board the ship, about the 13th to 16th January, 1855, and took receipts from the mate. The plaintiffs retained the receipts. Offered to perform their contract with F. A. Blossom. He was unable to pay. The name of the plaintiffs was on the back of the receipts. The receipts were in the usual form. Before the spirits of turpentine was all on board the vessel and without the production of the receipts, the defendant Champion gave to Woodhull bills of lading for it, taking from his son a guarantee that it should be put on board. The plaintiffs went to defendant Champion; demanded bills of lading on showing receipts; offered to pay freight. Champion refused. Plaintiffs then demanded the goods. Plaintiffs proved by a large number of witnesses the existence at this port of a uniform and well-known usage to deliver bills of lading to the person holding the ship's receipts. The defendants did not dispute this usage. Plaintiffs then replevied the goods. The cause was tried by a Jury in February, 1859. Verdict for plaintiffs. Defendant appeals. The exceptions during the trial were to the charge and proof of custom.

The grounds of appeal were that the delivery of the goods in question to the ship, under a contract with Woodhull alone and for the receiving of goods from him exclusively, entitled the ship to protection against any private conditions between the plaintiffs and Blossom, the purchaser; and that the ship-owners were in no fault in signing the bill of lading, under which they have been made to pay the value of the goods to the indorsees thereof; also that admission of the evidence of usage, and the instruction of the Judge to regard it as a test of diligence, were erroneous.

Decision reserved.

Daniel Lord for appellant. Gilbert Dean for respondent.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Ingraham, Leonard and Rosencrans.

The People ex rel. Wm. Mitchell vs. Robert T. Haws.—This is the case which has been so often reported, in respect to the question whether or not the law of April 16, 1852, allowing the Board of Supervisors of the First District to raise by tax "such additional annual compensation as they may deem proper," for Justices resident in said District, is constitutional. The money was raised, but the Comptroller refused to pay it, relying upon that section of the Constitution which prohibits such increase of salary "during continuance in office," which provision was made the substance of his return to the alternative mandamus in the case. The Court, at Special Term, overruled the relator's demurrer to that return, and this was an appeal from that judgment.

The case was now argued, counsel contending that the provision of the Constitution referred to was merely for the protection of the State Treasury, and that it did not apply to any additional compensation which the counties were authorized to make.

Decision reserved.

B. D. Silliman for relator; H. H. Anderson for Comptroller.

Contracts for the Conveyance of Real Estate—A Contract to "Deliver" is a Contract to Convey.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Ingraham, Clerke and Leonard.

Tunis S. Waring vs. Eleazar Ayres.—This was an action to compel the specific performance of a contract respecting the conveyance of certain real estate. The defence set up was that the contract was a nullity so far as any obligations to convey lands were concerned, and that its provisions were too indefinite to be enforced. The action was tried before a referee, and judgment rendered for plaintiff. The defendant appealed on the ground that to entitle a party to a specific performance of contract, the contract itself must be shown to be legal and valid in all respects, and the equity must be clear and unembarrassed. That no contract concerning lands can be enforced unless it is in writing, and no specific in its terms as to enable the Court to direct what shall be done without extrinsic aid. That the contract did not show that the plaintiff had any interest in the property which he could sell. It was not a conveyance in present, nor a covenant to convey; there was no covenant on the part of defendant to convey real estate to the plaintiff. The agreement was to deliver the lots, which clearly meant nothing but possession. The description was so indefinite and uncertain, and was consequently defective. A written contract could not be helped out by parole evidence, and the Referee erred in admitting evidence of conversations and parole agreements prior to the written contract.

The case was stated in the TIMES of March 11, at which date it was argued on appeal, and decision reserved.

The Court now renders the following opinion:

INGRAHAM, P. J.—The Referee in this case finds that the contract as set out by the plaintiff was made with the defendant. That at the time the defendant was the owner of two lots on One Hundred and Sixteenth-street, and they were the lots intended to be conveyed by the contract. That the defendant had been requested to convey and had refused, and as matter of law that the plaintiff was entitled to a judgment directing the defendant to give a deed of the two lots, by a good deed, with usual covenants of warrantee, &c. I think the Referee did not err in construing the words used in the contract, "deliver two lots, &c.," to mean a conveyance. No other mode is known by which a transfer the Street, and by the time the Second Board convened, the General Market resumed the firmness of tone which it lost yesterday. At the Second Board the bidding was quite spirited, with fewer sellers, and the consequence was an advance of 105 ℔ cent. on United States 6 ℔ cents. of 1881, and 7.30 ℔ cents. of 1864, and a corresponding good feeling on the railway list and Tennessees and Missouris. A strong Bear interest against the market has grown up within the past few days, especially against both classes of Erie, New-York Central, and part of the Western list, and this party pressed their advantage yesterday afternoon and early to-day, by putting out additional contracts ahead. To account for the decline, something was said on the street of French intervention, and whispers were indulged of bad or equivocal news from our great army before Corinth. The first of these inferences was not seriously indulged by any of the actual holders of Stocks, while the last was dispelled by the advices early in the day from Gen. HALLECK, and the near approach of his columns to the intrenched position of the rebels at Corinth. The Bull interest of course continue to enjoy the advantage of a superabundant Money Market at low rates of interest, and their ability to put up the market is only limited by their own considerations of prudence, and the rate of profit with which they are disposed to be satisfied. As usual after a very rapid and heavy rise, and on the first turn in the opposite direction, some of this party hastened to realize, thus contributing to a reaction which was neither unreasonable or undesirable to the healthy working of the market.

Late in the afternoon, on the Street, there was less excitement, prices leaving off steady, about as follows:

The individual deposits and country Bank balances in the Associated Banks of this City now amount to $120,000,000. The increase since our report on Monday morning is about four millions, and the prospect is that the gain will continue for some weeks longer, if not to the 1st of July. The increase comes chiefly from the heavy disbursements of the Government, which concentrate in the shape of warrants on the Treasury in this City in New-York from all parts of the country. As exchange in the West is slightly in favor of the East, but few of these disbursements for that quarter return in the shape of United States Notes. The money is left here on deposit, and drawn for as in the ordinary operations of domestic exchange. The same remark applies, in some measure, to the Government disbursements for account of Pennsylvania and New-England, the chief financial reliance of the Treasury being upon the New-York office.

The price of Money, on demand loan, has fallen to 3@4 ℔ cent. on very select collateral, and 4@5 ℔ cent. on miscellaneous security to the established Stock firms. It has also fallen below 5 ℔ cent. on prime short Merchant bills, owing to the light offering of this description of paper. We hear of transactions in 4@5 months Grocers' paper at 4½@5 ℔ cent. per annum. The price of Gold has not varied from yesterday's quotation, and Exchange rules steady at 113¾@114 ℔ cent.

The Bankers and Bill Brokers in the foreign business, and most of the heavy merchants of the City, have changed their place of daily meeting to the News Rooms of Mr. GILPIN, corner of Exchange-place and William-street. A commodious separate room is assigned for their use, and the old hour, 2½ o'clock, is made high 'Change.

The following was the day's business at the office of the Assistant Treasurer: Receipts, $2,038,900 21, including $203,000 for customs; Payments, $2,100,186 67; Balance, $17,663,105 77.

The following article on the National Finances, additional to the series on the subject heretofore published from the same able and practical pen, appears in the European Circular of this date, of Messrs. SAMUEL HALLET & CO.:

"The progress of events has now fully confirmed the views we have so long enforced, of the strength of the loyal States and of Government, and has completely solved the financial difficulties of the latter. The market value of its securities is not only far above their par value, but is considerably higher than the premium paid for gold. All the money the Government wants is proffered to it at from 4 to 5 ℔ cent.; and so abundant is capital, that it will undoubtedly soon be able to make long loans at 4½ ℔ cent. In exchange for its demand notes, gold may, and probably will continue to advance, but not in the same ratio as its interest-paying securities, which it will find no difficulty in exchanging for the former, with a larger premium in its favor.

The result will be accepted as extraordinary, and is a most gratifying testimony to the financial strength of the country; but still more so as expressing the progress of our people in political experience, and as the measure of confidence resulting therefrom. At the close of the last Administration, Government was glad to pay twelve ℔ cent for money, which was advanced rather from a patriotic motive, or sense of duty, which capitalists owed to themselves quite as much as to Government, to preserve unshaken, as far as possible, confidence in the National faith, than as an investment. As late as July last, with the most strenuous efforts of the Government officers in this City, the money necessary to meet its maturing obligations, then only small in amount, was raised only just in season to save a protest. Its six ℔ cents had fallen from 194 to 63. The right of one or more of the States to break up the Government was asserted, and it was not long before eleven of them combined for this purpose. The success of the attempt, it was felt, would be fatal to all government, and leave no prospect for the future but anarchy, which is more to be dreaded than the worst form of despotism. Our people were called upon to fight, not only as as a defence against threatened invasion, but to save themselves from material as well as political annihilation. With preparation for the contest came courage and confidence. The means of Government increased just in the degree that it showed itself earnest and resolute. All that was wanting was a purpose. From the darkest day, that of the defeat at Bull Run, which at a flash disclosed the magnitude of the contest in which we were engaged, public confidence has been daily growing stronger and stronger. The ability of Government to borrow has steadily increased, till it is now easier for it to borrow $50,000,000 in gold than it was two years ago to borrow $10,000,000. All feel that experience has cleared away the doubt and uncertainty in which the powers and functions of Government were involved. We had nominally a Government, but one without powers, even to defend its own property. The most threatening attitude might be assumed by insurgents, but the Executive could not raise its finger either by way of punishment or restraint. A spell rested upon it. It had so long pampered the elements of insubordination, that the most perfect immunity had been secured to the individual. No wonder it had come to be an object of distrust by other nations as well as ourselves. For a long time we stood stupidly gazing at the meteor of secession, when the attack upon Fort Sumter, like a thunderbolt, brought the nation to consciousness, dissolved the spell, and from that moment it entered upon the path that has conducted it to the result we now witness—suppression of the rebellion, financial ease and complete restoration of the National credit; and above all a nationality, and a government, with functions and powers commensurate with its duties and objects. The future is no longer involved in doubt. We have the strongest of all governments, because it is most nearly allied to the sympathies, habits and understanding of the people.

As the material welfare of the country depended upon its political unity, we could in no way promote the former so efficiently as by sustaining the latter. The one is the measure of the other. As the people in the loyal States were never before half so thoroughly united, they were never before so strong. They never enjoyed a greater degree of material comfort. Food and clothing were never more abundant, or more easily obtained by all classes. This fact, coupled with money abundant at the lowest rates of interest that ever prevailed, is the most conclusive proof that can be adduced of a sound and healthy financial condition. The end of all Governments, in their economic aspects or objects, is an abundance to eat and to wear. No prosperity is specious or superficial when such abundance exists. We may, we think, safely challenge history for a similar example of a people, who, in the midst of a gigantic civil war, grew rich and strong; who restored their national credit as hostilities progressed, and who conducted them to a successful termination, without abating a jot from the comforts and luxuries ordinarily enjoyed.

We have already discussed the sources or elements of our strength. These are to be found in the natural wealth in our soil; in the maintenance, undisturbed, of our industries; in our unrivaled means of internal commerce, and in the universal prevalence of labor. We have no rank consecrated from wealth, calling or rank, to indolence. The income arising from lands, or from permanent investments, do not go to parties entirely disconnected, except by ownership, from the soil. The consequence is, that although we spend freely, and often lavishly, the practice of rigid economy for a year or two, and to which we can bring ourselves as no other people can, compensates for great losses, and soon makes us rich, even with a great reduction from our ordinary revenues.

The abundant supply of capital, and the present low rates for money, can be explained in an equally simple and satisfactory manner. The North, fortunately before the rebellion had broke out, had put in operation all the machinery necessary for the development of its resources and the utilization of its strength. There was not a producer within the vast extent of the wide domain loyal to Government that did not, either by railroad or canal, possess a cheap and convenient outlet to market. The construction of new works, with the annual expenditures upon those opened, had, within the last ten years, absorbed more than $100,000,000 annually. For many years the investment was comparatively unproductive. The greater portion of it is now yielding a fair income to the owners, while the increased value it has given to the property of the country, from the commercial facilities afforded, exceed many times the whole expenditure. The annual drain for public works has almost entirely ceased. There are, in fact, no new enterprises presented to public attention. Money is becoming cheap, because there is no demand in channels where it was once most actively employed. But the amount expended on railroads, while these were in progress, was not by any means equal to that required to transfer 400,000 people annually from the Eastern States to the Western, to place them in a position of comfort,—to make the improvements required in their new condition, and to construct the cities that have risen as if by magic from their plains. The people of the Eastern States have, within the last ten years, sent more money into the State of Illinois for the purchase of lands, for the erection of buildings, and for improvements of one kind or another, than for its railroads. It has cost a larger sum to build the city of Chicago, which has added 120,000 to its population within the past ten years, than that invested in the system of public works of the whole State. Such expenditures are now measurably discontinued, abating, in an equal degree, the customary employment of capital.

A reason why there has been so little private and personal distress growing out of the rebellion, is owing to a fortunate subdivision of the various industries of the country. None is so disproportionate or overshadowing as not to be readily absorbed by the others in case disaster overtakes it. Massachusetts is the great seat of cotton manufactures in the country, yet every mill in the State might be closed without throwing, perhaps, a single person now employed in them, upon public charity. As fast as the hands are discharged they find employment and support in other branches of industry. To all, agriculture is a never failing resource. We hope to see this harmony of interests always preserved. Were England equally fortunate, she would escape the terrible problem now presented in the condition of millions, who, when employment in the cotton mills fails, must starve, or be relieved at public expense.

We have extended these remarks to some length, but we believe them to be a commentary upon the triumphant solution of all the financial difficulties by which Government has been surrounded. This has worked its way to a position of complete independence in the face of the most appalling difficulties, which foreigners confidently pronounced to be insurmountable. The result has no precedent in history. We have ourselves labored earnestly to produce it; and having seen the complete fulfillment not only of our wishes but our predictions, we shall be at liberty, in the future, to turn our attention to other themes, which have been neglected in the more pressing one of the public welfare.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

A brief dispatch from Gen. Wool to the War Department announces that Suffolk is in possession of our forces—Maj. Dodge having gone down from Norfolk and occupied it. Suffolk is southeast of Norfolk, at the junction of the Norfolk and Petersburgh and the Seaboard and Roanoke Railroads.

Gen. McClellan's army, at last accounts, was at Cumberland, on the Pamunky River, almost directly east of Richmond—to which point he had probably proceeded to facilitate the receiving of supplies. The rebels were believed to be massing at Bottom's Bridge, but it is hardly probable they will make a stand there, should they hear of the capture of Norfolk, the destruction of the Merrimac, and the passage of our iron-clad vessels up the James River. When last seen, on Monday, the Monitor and the Naugatuck were above City Point, steaming toward Richmond, and expected to reach Rockett's by evening. The Galena was not far behind them.

The rebel force on the other side of the Rappahannock River, beyond Fredericksburgh, apparently still maintains its position, and their outposts are not more that one hundred rods distant from ours—the pickets on both sides being alternately driven in. It is stated also that the rebel force is engaged in throwing up intrenchments.

Our dispatches from Monterey, Tenn., until recently the headquarters of Gen. Halleck, announce that the General has moved to the front, and is consequently superintending in person the immense preparations for the impending conflict at Corinth, for it appears to be now generally conceded that there is to be a great battle there. The two opposing armies are now very near each other, our forces averaging only from two and a half to three miles from the rebel intrenchments. There are daily skirmishes, in which our troops almost invariably gain some decided advantage of position. Mr. Sanford, Military Supervisor of the telegraph, has given orders to the operator at Cairo not to allow any report of the expected battle to be sent over the wires from that point, until the War Department gives permission.

A dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette, dated Farmington, Miss., May 11, says: "Gen. Pope's affair here on the 9th resulted in a loss on our side of 31 killed, 14 wounded, and 10 missing. Plumer's Brigade of Staley's Division and Palmer's Brigade of Paine's Division were alone engaged on our side. Groesbeck's Brigade was not engaged, but was sent to support heavy artillery. Among the killed on our side was Lieut.-Col. Miles, of the Forty-seventh Illinois. There is no sort of doubt we could have held our ground, but Pope was forbidden to reinforce, as that would have brought on a general engagement on our left, and so had to withdraw his brigade. The enemy made no pursuit, and so we occupied the ground again next morning. It is utterly useless to attempt predicting when an attack may be made. Extra supplies are accumulating at Monterey. The roads are excellent, and nothing seems likely to prolong delay except the want of the thorough knowledge of the enemy's position and strength. The centre and right are advancing to-day. It is not impossible we may soon be engaged in the construction of parallel trenches and regular approaches, though one or two things, necessary before commencing a siege, have not been accomplished. Gen. Halleck and his entire Staff have been on the front all day to-day directing movements in person."

The Memphis Avalanche of May 7 has these items from New-Orleans in addition to those which we have already received by telegraph. It says: "Four gunboats and one transport started for Baton Rouge on Saturday morning, May 3, at 9 o'clock. When they had gone up some sixteen miles from New-Orleans, a small boat was sent ashore, and a section of telegraphic wire, from post to post, was cut, so that the line could not be operated without putting in new wire. Up to the time our informant left, (11 o'clock on Saturday morning,) only seven full Federal regiments had been landed in New-Orleans. The last train of cars from Jackson went down to 'Kenner's' on Sunday, and our informant states that it was understood that no train would hereafter be permitted to go down further than 'Prairie,' some 20 miles from the city. All the prisoners in our forts and on the gunboats had been paroled, except only the commander of the Louisiana, who, after the forts had surrendered, cut loose that boat, set her on fire, and let her drift down the stream to a certain point, where she blew up and disappeared from mortal vision. For this act, after the surrender was made, he was sent to New-York. Vast quantities of molasses, sugar and cotton were destroyed. Only eighty bales of cotton could be found in the city, and that belonged to an Englishman, and was not destroyed. Provisions are represented as more plentiful, though flour still ranges from $25 to $30 per barrel."

The rebel leaders have virtually acknowledged the loss of the Mississippi Valley. On the 27th ult., the following brief address from Beauregard was published in the Memphis papers:

To Planters South:

The casualties of war have opened the Mississippi to our enemies. The time has, therefore, come to test the earnestness of all classes, and I call on all patriotic planters owning cotton in the possible reach of our enemies to apply the torch to it without delay or hesitation.

G. T. Beauregard.

Letters from Cumberland Gap, dated May 4, state that the reconnoissance of the 28th, which rebel dispatches have magnified into a battle, was led by Gen. Carter and Col. De Courcey, of the Sixteenth Ohio, and resulted in nothing of any importance. The rebels had felled all the timber for a long distance around their position, and our troops hid in this timber and kept up a skirmishing fire on the enemy for several hours, finally withdrawing with two men wounded. A "contraband" who came into camp a day or two after, stated that the rebels had five men killed, one of whom was a Captain.

Of Gen. Curtis' movements the St. Louis Republican, of May 12, says: "We hazard little in saying that he is, or will be in a day or two, in Little Rock, the capital of Arkansas, with all his cavalry and artillery, and that his infantry force will very soon reach Cape Girardeau. It is necessary to "retake and possess" the Arsenal at Little Rock, for that is one of the places seized and robbed by the Secessionists, and to which Mr. Lincoln referred when stating the objects for which the war was to be prosecuted. There is no large armed force in Arkansas to resist Gen. Curtis' movements. He has, of course, left bodies of troops behind him, to keep the peace of the Southwest until Gen. Brown, with his division of State troops, can reach headquarters at Springfield, and this will soon be done.

Adjutant-Gen. Thomas has telegraphed to Brigadier-Gen. Blunt, in command of the Department of Kansas, "to hurry up the organization and departure of the two Indian regiments."

On April 9, Hon. Edward Stanly resigned his position as City and County Attorney of San Francisco, to accept that of Military Governor of North Carolina, to which he has been appointed by Mr. Lincoln. Highly complimentary letters were addressed to him by Gov. Stanford and numerous citizens of San Francisco, on the occasion of his resignation. Mr. Stanly arrived in this City, yesterday, with his wife, on the way to the scene of his new duties.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday, a petition from citizens of Indiana was presented by Mr. Wright, of that State, asking Congress to stop the agitation of the negro question, and attend to the business of putting down the rebellion. The resolution to suspend the payment of the troops actually employed in the Department of the West, until certain charges of fraud could be investigated, was considered, but laid over without action. Mr. Powell's resolution, asking information of the Secretary of War relative to the arrest and imprisonment of citizens of Kentucky, was taken up, and Mr. Sumner's amendment, calling upon the President for the information, if compatible with the public interests, was adopted. The resolution as thus amended was adopted. A bill was reported from the Special Committee on Confiscation, and was laid over. A resolution calling upon the President to inform the Senate whether any foreign Power had proposed to interfere in our National affairs, was introduced by Mr. Trumbull, of Illinois, but was laid over. The Indian Appropriation bill was then debated until the Senate went into Executive session. No other business was done in open session.

In the House, a joint resolution requiring the Superintendent of the census to keep records of the names of adult males, heads of families and freeholders, was passed. Two bills were reported from the Select Committee on Confiscation. They were made the special order for Tuesday next, and the debate upon them will continue throughout the rest of the week—the vote on both bills to be taken on Monday week. The Secretary of the Interior was requested to inform the House what retrenchment can be made in the expenditures. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Army Appropriation bill, and Mr. Crisfield made a speech in opposition to the general principle of confiscation. The bill was finally passed without amendment, and the House adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the steamship Niagara at Halifax last evening, we receive advices from Europe two days later than by the Jura. The most notable feature of the news is the reiteration of the rumors that France and England intend to interfere in the affairs of this country. The rumors, however, are very vague, somewhat contradictory, and probably have no foundation. The announcement is made in the London Times that the British Government has gradually withdrawn even its originally small stake in the military part of the enterprise in Mexico, and has now little beyond a moral participation in the matter. The Times adds: "We shall have to get such redress for the past and guarantees for the future as are found to be obtainable, and we want nothing more." The papers of London were filled with glowing accounts of the opening of the Great Exhibition. The number of persons present was 33,000—all season ticket holders. There is no change to note in the condition of the markets.

The steamship Champion arrived at this port yesterday from Aspinwall on the 6th inst., with the mails, passengers and treasure from California. Her treasure list foots up $484,019. The news from the United States of Colombia by this arrival is important. Gen. Mosquera, Provisional President, was at Piedras, in Boyacia, on the frontier of Antioquia, with a large force prepared to attack Gov. Jiraldo, whose forces were inferior to his in numbers and equipment. The rumored capture of Gen. Enao, the mainstay of the Conservatives, by Gen. Lopez, is fully confirmed. It is likely that this disaster to the Reactionists will lead to their submission to Mosquera's rule. The guerrillas in Santander, left behind by Canal, had been attacked and defeated by Gen. Salgar. Mosquera has issued a proclamation, under date of April 5, calling a National Convention to meet in Carthagena on Aug. 6, to definitively constitute the Government.

It is estimated that the aggregate loss of insurance companies, by the fire in Troy, will be $1,385,000, a little more than one-third the amount of property destroyed.

A very large and influential meeting of citizens was held yesterday noon, in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, for the purpose of extending aid to the sufferers by the recent terrible conflagration at Troy, N. Y. Mayor Opdyke presided, and addresses were made by Prosper M. Wetmore, Joseph Hoxie, C. H. Marshall, Mr. Atwood, and others. A very influential Committee was raised, for the purpose of collecting and forwarding subscriptions. Several thousand dollars have already been forwarded. Capt. Bailey, of the Mississippi Flotilla, and Parson Brownlow were present, and most cordially welcomed. They both made speeches in response—that of Parson Brownlow being quite characteristic.

Gen. Burnside has very quietly put an extinguisher on C. H. Foster, the gentleman who has so long been trying to get recognized as a Member of Congress from North Carolina. He advertised himself to address the citizens of Newbern a few evenings since, a thing which, as Gen. Burnside put it, he thought would be very foolish for him to do, or the General to permit. The Military Governor appointed by the President, was to shape the policy of the Government in the State, and he could not permit anything to be done which might hereafter prove to be a source of embarrassment.

The rebel prisoners are at work, under Gen. Valen's direction, removing the torpedoes which were so ingeniously and barbarously arranged by Rains and his confederates before the evacuation of Yorktown.

The Nashville Union, of May 10, states that 3,600 bales of cotton have been shipped from Tennessee since the opening of trade on March 10. It has brought from 19 to 21 cents per pound, in gold or Treasury notes, and it is thought that during the coming season at least 18,000 bales will be disposed of. The rebel incendiaries have probably destroyed 8,000 bales.

Professor M. J. Fletcher recently lost his life in a railroad collision at Sullivan, Ind. He graduated at Brown University, Providence, R. I.; in 1852 was appointed Superintendent of Public Instruction in Indiana by Gov. Morton, and upon the breaking out of the war was sent East to purchase arms. He afterwards served as aid to Gen. Reynolds in Western Virginia, and at the time of his death was laboring earnestly to secure the comfort of sick and wounded soldiers from Indiana in the Western Department.

Three men of the Second Battalion, Fourteenth Regiment United States regular infantry, attempted to desert from Fort Trumbull on the night of May 8. They were detected, arrested and put in close confinement.

The charges preferred against Col Jennison, recently put under arrest by Brig.-Gen. Sturgis, have been published. Among them are the following that in various speeches made to his command, he said: "That he had no confidence in the present Administration," or words to that effect. That he utterly despised Gen. H. W. Halleck, and that afterwards he denounced Gens. Halleck, Sturgis, Denver and Mitchell as secessionists and traitors.

Surgeon W. R. Thrall, of the Twenty-seventh Ohio, son of Judge Thrall, of Columbus, was taken prisoner by a straggling party of the enemy, near Farmington, during a reconnoissance by Gen. Pope, while looking for his ambulance.

The thick-skulled Canadians are actually beginning to get possession of an idea or two about the progress of the National arms. The Montreal Herald, which has been unscrupulous in its misrepresentation of our affairs, in its Tuesday's issue ridicules the false prophets of London, and says: "For our own parts we have never seen the advantage of allowing ourselves to be deceived, or of deceiving others, as to the course of events. We never doubted that the North would reestablish the rule of law throughout the Union; and we suspect that the time within which that will be accomplished is now rapidly approaching its completion."

The Grand Jury of Bourbon County, Ky., at its last session, found indictments against 34 citizens of that County for having entered the service of the Southern Confederacy, and against 12 others for invading Kentucky to make war against the State.

At General Term of the Supreme Court, yesterday, the case of Judge Mitchell against the Comptroller was argued on appeal. This is the case in which the relator seeks to recover an "additional" allowance of salary which was raised by the Board of Supervisors, by tax, under an act of the Legislature, while the relator was in office, It is stated that Edwin James, Esq., will solicit a meeting of the Bar for Saturday next, and that he then intends to show that he was not disbarred in England, and that his diploma was never revoked.

The reaction against the Stock Market noticed in our last report continued through the early hours of the forenoon, but the decline brought in new orders to buy, and the market resumed much firmness, and recovered ¼@1¼ ₩ cent in prices. Money very easy. The deposits in Bank have gone up to $120,000,000. Gold steady at 103¼@¾, and Exchange 113¾@114 ₩ cent.

Flour was a trifle dearer yesterday, the receipts having been light and the demand good. Wheat arrived and sold more freely than on any other day this season, the market closing firmly. Corn was in fair request at rising prices. Teas, Sugars, Rio Coffee, Fire-crackers and Tallow were actively sought after. Provisions attracted more attention; Pork was unsettled; Beef buoyant. Whisky was quiet, as were also Hemp, Hides, Metals, Molasses, Oils, Rice, Seeds, Tobacco, Candles, Fish, Skins. Spices, Foreign Liquors and Naval Stores. A fair inquiry prevailed for Hay, Hops, Foreign Coal, Sole Leather, Lime, Salt, Wool and Whalebone. The freight market was moderately active, and rates were well supported, with 570 vessels, of all classes, in port, including two vessels (a ship and a schooner) advertised as being up for New-Orleans.

The Live Stock markets have generally been overstocked this week. Beeves number near 4,800 head, mainly of large size and good quality. Prices are ½c. less than last week, or 8c.@8¼c. for good to choice, and 7c.@7½c. for ordinary to fair. Average of all kinds, 7¾c., and stock all sold under a pressure. Sheep are rather scarce, and worth 4½c.@4¾c. ₩ lb. They are all clipped. Live hogs are in excess of the demand, large numbers remaining unsold. Prime corn-fed hogs are worth 3½c.@3¾c.; light, poor stock, 3c., and still-fed, 3¼c.@3½c.

The Confiscation Bills.

The conferences between the Select Committees of Senate and House on the Confiscation bills have resulted in the submission of two measures, quite different in scope, but both exceedingly stringent. The first provides for the forfeiture of all property belonging to those who hold offices of honor, trust or profit in the rebel services, and to those bearing arms in that service who, within sixty days after the President has issued a warning proclamation, shall not return to their allegiance. In the absence of the recusant, the proceedings may be had in rem, or against the property itself, as in case of seizures under the law of customs. The second bill simply affects property in the labor of slaves, the slaves of all rebels being liberated by the act, and when suit shall be brought to reclaim them, the claimant will have to establish the fact of his undeviating loyalty.

The object of these measures is twofold. It is all important to spare, as far as possible, the effusion of loyal blood and loyal money; while due consideration must be had of the lives of the rebels themselves. Any measure less violent than the use of arms, should be preferred as a means of repressing the rebellion. To insist upon bloodshed, when a less fatal alternative is presented, is certainly not the dictate of humanity or prudence. The Border State interest advocates the use of every engine of destruction leveled at the lives of the rebels; but is horrified at any assault upon their property. It has no reluctance to burden the loyal States with thousands of millions of debt; it shudders at depriving the guilty insurgents of one acre or serf of his possessions. The real Conservative, on the other hand, would spare as far as the economy is practicable, the lives as well as the property of the rebels. It offers them a very comprehensive, if not a general amnesty. Notwithstanding they have been a year in arms, and have cost the Government the aggregate value of Southern property, it grants them immunity from punishment if, within the two months indicated by the Presidential notice, they return to their allegiance. But persistence in revolt, after that notice, closes the gates of mercy, and the penalties at once attach. In the one bill these penalties take the shape of a forfeiture of all property; in the other, property in slaves is alone forfeited. The advantage of the former measure is that it avoids the selection of a particular species of property for seizure, and the presumptions raised against the motives of those who make the selection.

Without anticipating the course of reasoning likely to be used in the discussion of these bills, we would earnestly protest against the "non-irritation" argument, which appears to be the only weapon of the men who oppose all forms of confiscation. Decline to punish treason lest we irritate traitors; lest we anger those who, in wanton revolt and outrage, have sacrificed, among the hills of Tennessee and Kentucky, hosts of loyal lives; who slaughtered thousands of our people pitilessly at Shiloh; who, in their bitter animosity, have abandoned all respect to the usages of warfare; have shot their prisoners, buried torpedoes in the way of advancing armies, led "the merciless Indian savages" to the destruction of their fellow-countrymen; who, in fact, have shown that diabolical malignity could not provoke them to indulgence in more ferocious excesses! These are the people we are not to "irritate;" as if the policy of "non-irritation" had not been tried by the Government, until forbearance lost the guise of virtue, and the entire nation arose in arms to protest against the coward temper of the Executive! Let any one who fancies the antipathy of Southern rebels can be more deeply rooted by any form that may be given to Congressional legislation, look at the sullen citizens of Norfolk and New-Orleans; count the value of the tobacco, cotton, and molasses destroyed, through pure hatred and malice, before the advancing armies of the Union, and then frankly answer whether or not he believes this hostile feeling can be a whit further intensified by the passage of the most stringent confiscation measure. It is by firmness, by just and impartial severity, by a plain exhibit of the horror with which we regard the crime of these men, that the authority of the Government is to be restored. Any exhibition of weakness will only feed their pride, promote resistance, and urge them to demand terms that can never be granted.

A Splendid Opening for Commodore Goldsborough.—In the present situation of affairs on the Peninsula, infinite interest attaches to the movements of the gunboats and ironclads that are pushing their way up James River toward Richmond. For whether the rebel force between the Chickahominy and the James awaits and gives battle to the army of Gen. McClellan, or makes another, and this time the last, of its masterly retreats, it will depend on the gunboats to cut off its retreat and enable Gen. McClellan to capture the whole force. When last heard from, the gunboats were pushing vigorously "on to Richmond," having silenced two rebel batteries by the way, and three days ago they were within little more than as many hours run of the Capital. Now there are but two or three possible points at which the rebels can retreat southward across the James—and these are between City Point, opposite Petersburgh, and at Richmond. We take it for granted that our gunboats will destroy the floating means of transport the enemy may have prepared to avail himself of in case of flight. All that will then need to be done will be to either destroy or simply command by our guns the railroad bridge (of the Richmond and Danville Railroad) at Richmond, at the same time that another gunboat makes a détour into the Appomattox and up to Petersburgh, (but a dozen miles from its embouchure into the James,) and doing the same for the bridges there. Since the suicide of the Merrimac has relieved our fleet from police duty, we presume a portion of it, including the Monitor and Naugatuck, has been sent up to reinforce the gunboats that went up last week, and that we now have sufficient naval force to secure, beyond a doubt, the important objects indicated. There is no reason why the whole vast rebel army on the Peninsula should not, in this way, be captured; and the country expects that it will be so. Here is a splendid opening for Commodore Goldsborough to carry off the richest laurels of the war. We presume he means to avail himself of it.

One Wrong Partially Righted.—The Senate Committee which went to Yorktown to ascertain whether Gen. W. F. Smith was drunk or not at a recent engagement of our troops with the rebels, have returned. They report that he was not drunk,—that there was never the slightest foundation for the story, and that he is one of the most meritorious officers in the service.

We trust the first thing the Senate will do in consequence of this report, will be to confirm his nomination. For some reason or other, Gen. Smith's name has been one of the very few which the Senate has seen fit to pass over. He has been in the field, toiling night and day to perfect the discipline of his command, denying himself rest, comfort, and everything which Senators as well as men in general most highly prize, for the sake of serving the country; and yet that body has seen fit to let him thus remain without confirmation, ignorant whether he had any command or not, and by no means certain that on the very eve of some important engagement his whole division might not be taken away from him and handed over to some fresh political General who had succeeded in more favorably impressing individual Senators with a sense of his merit. What the prejudice is which has thus silently but effectually operated to his detriment, we are left to conjecture. Mr. Morrill, a representative from his own State, became its ready mouth-piece, and thus compelled an inquiry into its foundation. On the floating rumor of some utterly irresponsible person, Mr. Morrill asserted in Congress, and sent it, on that high authority, through the whole length and breadth of the land, that Gen. Smith was drunk on the field during an action, and fell twice from his horse. The assertion was instantly met by the indignant denial of every officer present on the spot, and was as thoroughly and effectually silenced as such a rumor ever can be.

We call upon the Senate to confirm Gen. Smith's appointment forthwith. It is the only reparation they can make a most able, indefatigable and efficient officer for the outrageous wrong inflicted upon him in Congress. We trust it will be done without delay.

And Now for Charleston.—There was a period when for months all eyes were directed to Charleston, and the intense desire and passionate cry of the whole country was that the traitor city that inaugurated rebellion should be assailed, captured and punished. But we think very little about Charleston now, and the country is quite willing patiently to await the pleasure of the Government in regard to its capture. The reason is that everybody knows we can take Charleston any moment we please. The Monitor and Galena can coolly steam into the harbor, past Sumter and up to the city, while all the shot the fort can rain on them fall from off their mailed sides like the peas of a pop-gun. It would have been a formidable and a hazardous business to have attempted to run with wooden vessels the gauntlet of the rebel batteries and the fire from Fort Sumter. But with the iron-clads cela va sans dire: and we presume that just as soon as they are relieved from the important mission they now have to fill in the James River, this will be the very next duty they will be sent on. When Richmond falls, "On to Charleston" will probably be the substitute for the old battle-cry. But even if the Government shall see fit to reserve the capture of Charleston for the termination of a war inaugurated in that guilty city, the country will be perfectly satisfied, knowing that the fruit is ripe, and ready at any moment for plucking.

Rebels Discouraged.—Five hundred Southern troops in Virginia lately deserted in a body, and we now hear that ninety rebel prisoners, who were to be returned from Fortress Monroe to Richmond, refused to go, and desired to take the oath of allegiance to the United States. These indications show anything but that unanimity of Southern sentiment of which we have heard so much. We shall have more such desertions as soon as favorable opportunities offer.

Jurisdiction of Admiralty Courts—A Vexed Question Settled.—We surrender much of our space, this morning, to an important admiralty decision of the United States Supreme Court, settling what has been a vexed and doubtful question. Under the twelfth Admiralty rule, adopted by the Supreme Court in 1844, and several decisions of the Court both preceding and following it, it had been generally understood that the Admiralty Courts of the country had jurisdiction to enforce liens upon vessels for supplies, as well under the State lien laws, where the vessel was a domestic one, as under the maritime law, where the vessel was foreign; and under this view of the case very many suits were entertained by the District Courts to enforce these liens. But, some years ago, the Supreme Court seemed to have adopted different views of the law, and to have come to the conclusion that there was no jurisdiction in an Admiralty Court to enforce a lien upon a domestic vessel.

Following out this apparent variation of opinions, the Supreme Court in 1858 modified the 12th Rule, as will be recollected, striking out that part of it which allowed such suits to be brought in Admiralty. And thereupon the District Courts acting upon their understanding of these altered views, dismissed cases, right and left, on the ground that they had no jurisdiction of such cases.

But the Supreme Court had directed that the change of the Twelfth Rule should not take effect until a certain date, and this case, in which we publish the opinion, had been brought to enforce a lien against a domestic vessel, before the expiration of the time appointed. The claimants of the vessel, who had purchased her without notice of the lien in question, carried the case up to the Supreme Court, arguing that if such cases were not within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, as the Supreme Court was understood to have decided, they could not be brought within it by a Rule of the Court, because the Court had no authority to confer jurisdiction, but only to prescribe the mode of its exercise.

It appears now, from the opinion of Judge Taney in the case, that the whole thing has been a mistake; that jurisdiction is not involved in the matter at all, and that the twelfth rule was modified, not because the Admiralty had no jurisdiction over domestic liens, but because if they were enforced in Admiralty, they would be apt to call for the decision of questions which should more properly be decided by the State Courts.

We congratulate the Bar on the determination of this vexed question. And if they find any difficulty in harmonizing the views of this decision with those of the past few years, it can hardly be as great as the difficulty of harmonizing those decisions with others of yet earlier date.

Confirmations.—While confirming the great body of the President's nominations to high commands in the army, the Senate has made a few exceptions, apparently without any adequate motive. The case of Gen. W. F. Smith has already been noticed. Another is that of Gen. Marcy, who is the Chief of Gen. McClellan's Staff, and who has rendered most important service to the army under his command. An idea seems to be very prevalent that those Generals only merit favor who distinguish themselves by actual fighting. This would do very well if all Generals had an equal chance to engage in fighting. But ninety-nine hundredths of the duty of an army—officers and soldiers—is to prepare for fighting; and when the critical moment arrives, it is a matter of accident, depending upon the movements of the enemy, and not at all upon the will of any particular officer, whether he will have a chance for distinction or not. One of the ablest, most pains-taking and meritorious officers in our army is Fitz John Porter. Though laboring under a disease which renders exposure almost certainly fatal and severe labor next to impossible, he has labored with intense and inexhaustible enthusiasm to prepare the army for the advance it is now making upon Richmond. Night after night, in darkness, rain and mud, without food, rest or comfort of any kind, has he passed in exploring and surveying the work in progress, and in perfecting the arrangements for the grand assault. His reward would have been complete if he could have had a chance for the distinction which a soldier most covets, when the moment for the charge arrived.

The same thing is true of Gen. Marcy. His duties are in another department of the service, it is true—but they are equally indispeneable to the service, and have been performed with equal devotion, self-denial and success. They ought not to be forgotten or overlooked. Still less should his case be made an exception to the general rule of the Senate, which has been to confirm all the nominations made by the President.

The Department of the Interior.—We observe with satisfaction that the Commercial Advertiser and the World have made the most ample retraction of the injurious intimations, contained in those papers some weeks since, against the integrity of the head and chief subordinates of the Interior Department. Our own information did not verify those accusations. We therefore refrained from giving them a place in the columns of the Times. The hasty publication and the ready credence often extended to rumors of malfeasance on the part of public officers, cannot but undermine the wholesome confidence at home and the fair repute abroad, without which no Government, especially in time of war, can be conducted with the greatest measure of success. It may be questioned whether the manifest benefits derived from a watchful and jealous eye upon the servants of the people, are not too frequently confronted with the evil consequences of inconsiderate personal attacks.

The Department of the Interior is one of the most extensive and complicated branches of the Government. It includes the bureaux of Pensions and Patents, to say nothing of other laborious and important divisions. The work required of the Secretary is both judicial and administrative. It enjoins much attention to details, as well as studious examination into special subjects. One of the most distinguished incumbents of the office, who was afterward at the head of the Treasury, bore testimony to the truth of these observations. It is but just to the present Secretary of the Interior to say, that his administration of the department, and his general course as a Cabinet Minister, have augmented his reputation as a statesman of marked energy, integrity and mental force. To his special efforts in support of the prosecutions against slaveships and slave-traders, we learn from the best authority, much of the success which has attended those cases during the last year is undoubtedly due.

Foster Extinguished.—Gen. Burnside reveals fresh evidence of his sterling judgment and firmness in snubbing that fellow Foster, whose name has so suggestive a rhyme. Foster has been the bête noir of North Carolina. He figured for a while as Provisional Governor of the State, self-appointed; then as a Congressman, self-elected. His career in both functions was brought to a termination at once appropriate and prompt; but resolute to make a good thing out of his adopted State, he has since hovered about the Union camps, awaiting the chance for a fresh demonstration. At Newbern the other day he announced his purpose to deliver a stump speech to the free and independent electors of that city. Now the city is under martial law, a circumstance in itself prohibiting popular political gatherings; and, besides, Foster is a humbug, and it behooves the military police to put down alike all quack doctoring and doctrine. So Gen. Burnside forbade the speech, and the orator was unheard. Perseverance in this judicious course will entitle the General to the gratitude of the entire people of the State. The popular horror of Foster is represented as something worse than the nightmare.

The Advance to Suffolk.—The first impression given by the announcement that Suffolk had been captured by the Union forces, was that Burnside had done too late what he should have done long ago. It is a relief to find this charge unfounded. Suffolk is in the hands of Gen. Wool's Division; while Burnside is doubtless carrying out with entire success his movement toward the interior of North Carolina. The other day the seizure of Suffolk would have been hailed as a most important event, because it severed the connection between Norfolk and Richmond. The event is still important, if it is to be followed by an active advance of Gen. Wool's army upon Petersburgh, reaching the rear of Johnston's force, and cutting off its retreat. It is twelve months since we pointed out in the Times the eminent advisability of reaching Richmond by a simultaneous movement up both banks of the James.

The New Governor of North Carolina.—Hon. Edward Stanley arrived here yesterday, from California, on his way to North Carolina. With him came the San Francisco papers announcing his resignation of an important civil position in that city and his determination to accept the post of temporary Governor of North Carolina, tendered him by the President. The news is in all respects gratifying. A native of North Carolina himself, one of a family profoundly respected throughout the State, a steady and conservative Whig, exceeding popular, personally and politically, he must be less objectionable to the population he is sent to govern than any other possible selection. The war will have done good service to the Border States should it do nothing more than substitute Andy Johnson, Edward Stanley and John M. Botts, for Harris, Ellis and Letcher.

Trade to Eastern Virginia.—We trust the policy of relaxing the blockade of our Southern coast will be extended as speedily as possible to Norfolk. The inhabitants of that section of Virginia, and of the whole Peninsula between the James and York rivers, are actually suffering for the necessaries of life. The rebel armies quartered among them for the Winter consumed nearly all their grain and other provisions, and the subsequent passage of the Union troops completed their exhaustion. They need trade more than anything else. They have little money, it is true, that would be available here, but they have valuable property, and could doubtless obtain credit to an amount that would afford them very great relief. Nothing will strengthen the Union feeling more rapidly than a brisk and active trade with the North.

A Commissioner of Agriculture.—The bill establishing a Department of Agriculture has passed both Houses of Congress. The President, having no constitutional objections to offer, will unquestionably sign it; and out of the overtasked Treasury will be taken, at the lowest estimate, some $30,000 a-year, to effect what might have been effected for a tithe of the sum. The only advantage, indeed, we can discover in giving this interest a department instead of that more economical machine, a bureau, consists in the presence at the Cabinet councils, debating grave questions of war and foreign policy, of a member deeply versed in esculents, at home among cereals, and profound in the mysteries of mangel-wurzel, and the best remedies for the rot. We trust the Commissioner will have a seat in the Cabinet.

Important Accessions to the Bar.

"Albert Cardoza, Samuel Jones, and Henry A. Cram have been appointed examiners of the applicants for admission to the Bar. These gentlemen are skillful practitioners, and the aspirants for legal fame must be up to their work, or they will be compelled to wait for a more auspicious opportunity. By the way, we observe that several promising students from 'the New-York University' have been admitted to practice on the application of Prof. Wedgwood. Among the number, we notice Smith Ely, Jr., John Quackenbush, Wilbur P. Walker, representative from 'Maine,' and other precocious juveniles. The doors of the University swing wide open, and all who desire to put out their shingles must hurry up and make it all right with the 'Professor.'

We trust that Walker will continue, as usual, to look out for the 'Maine' chance, and we also hope that 'Wedgwood' is not synonymous with dead-wood. Prof. Wedgwood seems to have a 'power of attorney' of unlimited authority."

We cut the foregoing from the Leader, and subtract sufficient room from the constant pressure of news and comment on the war, to say a few words about it,—not so many as its importance deserves. It seems almost idle to talk in New-York of the necessity of purity in the Judiciary. Yet every one acknowledges that necessity and bemoans the decadence which has shown itself in some quarters. The tendency to make our judgeships matters of political reward has led to

The Withdrawal of British Troops from Mexico.

SUCCESS OF THE GREAT EXHIBITION.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL NEWS

HALIFAX, Wednesday, May 14.

The steamship Niagara, Capt. STONE, which left Liverpool at 10½ A. M. of the 3d, and Queenstown 4th, arrived this evening with 35 passengers for Boston and 58 for Halifax, together with £4,000 in specie for Halifax. She will sail at 9 o'clock for Boston.

May 4, at 5 P. M., passed the Asia, eight miles west of Roche Point.

The Hibernian arrived off Londonderry on the morning of the 2d.

Vague rumors of threatened intervention in America continue in circulation, and the dullness and decline in cotton is attributed to them.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News, writing on the 1st, says:

"It is positively stated, to-day, in official circles, that the French and English Ministers at Washington have received identical instructions to attempt a moral intervention, exclusive of any idea of forcible intervention, in the hope of putting an end to the civil war."

The Paris correspondent of the Indépendance Belge, reiterates his statement relative to the contemplated intervention by France and England for reëstablishment, in the most absolute manner, and says:

"I have reason to believe the project will very soon be made known officially to the public. It is said that certain conditions will be imposed on the South, having for its object the gradual emancipation of its slaves. I am assured that in order to generalize the measure for the abolition of Slavery, France and Spain have made a secret treaty by which this unnatural institution would disappear from Cuba in a short time."

A meeting, attended by about six thousand people, was held at Aston-under-Lyne, to consider the crisis in the cotton districts. A motion calling on the Government to recognize the Confederate States, and adopt Mr. CORDEN'S proposed alteration in maritime law, was proposed.

An amendment was offered, calling on the Governments of America, England and France, to crush the rebellion, but on a division the original motion was carried by a considerable majority.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF BRITISH TROOPS FROM MEXICO.

The Times says:

Our Government has gradually withdrawn even its originally small stake in the military part of the enterprise in Mexico, and we have now little beyond a moral participation in the matter. We shall get such redress for the past and guarantees for the future as are found to be obtainable, and we want nothing more.

GREAT BRITAIN.

In the House of Commons on the 1st, some explanations were made as to the delay in the American mails landed at Queenstown. The principal difficulty was in catching steamers from Dublin for Holyhead, and the Government stated that arrangements were being made to remove the difficulty.

On the 2d, Sir G. C. LEWIS said the House would soon have ample opportunity to discuss the question of defences, as it would be his duty shortly to ask leave to bring in a bill for another loan for national defences.

Mr. LAYARD stated that the Italian Government had sent sent over Commissioners to negotiate a treaty of Commerce.

Col. PATTEN, who had intended to call attention to the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts, postponed the matter for a few days.

Mr. MAGUIRE called attention to the distress and reported deaths from starvation in Ireland. He asked what the Government proposed doing.

Sir ROBERT PEEL admitted that the distress did exist to some extent, but the accounts were greatly exaggerated. The Government deeply regretted the distress, but could not attempt to alleviate it by indiscriminate relief.

Mr. LAYARD explained that the military arrangements at Shanghai were purely of a defensive character.

An influential deputation waited on the President of the Poor Law Board, relative to the distress in cotton manufacturing districts, and pointed out the inadequacy of the poor law to meet it. The President explained to what extent the poor law guardians could depart from the provisions of the law. He thought the matter should be left in the hands of the guardians, who were doing their duties very efficiently.

Graphic details are published of the opening ceremonies at the Great Exhibition, which passed off with perfect success. The number present was 33,000, all being season ticket holders.

The Times pronounces the ceremonial emphatically the grandest, best managed and most imposing public pageant seen in England for years. Matters were, of course, in an unfinished state in the building, but certainly at a more forward state than at the opening in 1851. Compared with 1851, the mere spectacle was as much more gorgeous as the exhibition itself better. Earl GRANVILLE, in the name of the Commissioners, presented an address to the Duke of Cambridge as a representative of the Queen, and the Duke made a suitable reply, the death of Prince ALBERT being feelingly dwelt upon by both. The Duke of Cambridge subsequently proclaimed, by command of the Queen, the Exhibition formally opened, amidst enthusiastic cheering. The musical arrangements were carried out according to the programme, and were very grand.

The Morning Post, in an editorial on the opening, moralizes on and deplores the sad spectacle presented by the American attendance at the exhibition.

The second day the admission was one guinea. The number of people was 32,596.

The Times publishes a letter from RUSSELL, explaining the difficulties thrown in his way by Secretary STANTON, when he sought to visit the British man-of-war Rinaldo. He said the difficulties amounted virtually to prohibition, and thinks Secretary STANTON would order away the Rinaldo if he dared. RUSSELL further says in conclusion:

"I may be permitted to add that I have received assurances that Gen. MCCLELLAN has expressed himself strongly in reference to Secretary STANTON'S conduct to himself and to me in the matter, and that he and all his Staff have been kind enough to declare to my friends how deeply they regret my absence from their camps."

The extraordinary Yelverton case has been again opened at Dublin, the arguments on the bill of exceptions taken by Major YELVERTON having commenced in the Court of Common Pleas.

Four deputations from Liverpool had an interview, on the 2d, with the members of the Government, on the question relating to the shipping interest. The objects were not stated.

FRANCE.

It is stated that further reinforcements of French troops and war material are to be sent to Mexico.

There is a question of sending Marshal NEILL to Rome, charged with military and diplomatic powers. It is said he will be charged to conciliate, if possible, the protection France owes to the Holy See with the rights of the Italian nation.

A letter from Mexico in the Moniteur comments on the intolerable conduct of the Mexican Government, and asserts that there is a probability that the French troops will not delay marching on the City of Mexico.

The recall of Gen. GOYON from Rome is confirmed. It was after much difficulty and hostilities that the Emperor compelled the Pope, and the people say it purchased such relief as the Emperor that she could not or would not appear at the dinner given to the Queen of Holland, on the 30th, at the Tuileries, how did she appear at the ball which followed the dinner."

It is believed by the Italians in Paris that Rome will soon be occupied by the Piedmontese troops.

The Constitutionnel asserts that the recall of Gen. GOYON will not change the French policy at Rome.

The Bourse was firm. Rentes had advanced to 71f.

ITALY.

The King remained at Naples, and continued to be enthusiastically received. He would proceed in a few days to Palermo.

It was reported that the Prince NAPOLEON would visit the King at Naples.

The conspiracy at Milan was exaggerated.

The Viceroy of Egypt had arrived at Messina, en route for Naples.

At Genoa, a most startling robbery had been committed. Six thieves, armed with pistols and daggers, entered one of the principal banks, garroted the officials, and made off with 800,000 francs.

PRUSSIA.

A commission has been appointed to proceed to England to collect information relative to iron-plated ships. If sufficient knowledge is not obtainable there, the Commission will go to France and America.

HOLLAND.

The Bank of Amsterdam had advanced its rate of discount to 4.

POTUGAL.

The new Ministry has been frugally consolidated. The Ministry of Finance had produced a large reduction on salt fish, and a reduction is also projected on the duty on muscovado sugar.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Cape of Good Hope mails to the end of March have reached England. The news is unimportant.

There is very little improvement in trade. The drought continued in the Western Provinces.

INDIA, CHINA AND AUSTRALIA.

The India, China and Australia mails have arrived at Suez.

Melbourne dates are to March 25. No details are received.

A Bombay telegram of the 12th says the cotton crop is shorter and the quality worse than last year.

The Calcutta merchants had petitioned for and the Bombay merchants against the repeal of the import duties.

LATEST VIA QUEENSTOWN.

LIVERPOOL, Sunday, May 4.

The King of Italy in reply to an address presented at Naples on the 2d, expressed his gratitude for its reception, and said the public works will increase in activity. The public safety is not yet reëstablished because Rome is the centre of conspiracies; but believe me when I say that as much as Italians wish to recover Rome, the French wish quite as much to terminate the occupation of it.

Catarrh, and its successful treatment by Dr. LIGHTHILL, of this City, is thus spoken of in a recent number of the Evening Post:

"Catarrh, or chronic inflammation of the nasal passages, is a disease characterized by a profuse discharge from the head or throat, accompanied by an offensive breath, headache, &c., &c. It frequently gives rise to diseases of the throat and air passages, in many cases producing pulmonary consumption. Sometimes it extends to the middle ear and produces deafness; again, it spreads through the tear-passages to the eye, and inflames that organ, causing the tears to overflow upon the slightest irritation or exposure, producing what is called "weeping eye." Catarrh has hitherto defied medical treatment, and has been considered as incurable. Owing to its effects on sight and hearing, it has frequently been brought under the notice of Dr. LIGHTHILL, of this City, who has devoted a large portion of his time and attention to the subject, and has succeeded in discovering a method of treatment under which the worst cases yield readily, and admit of a cure.

This achievement of medical science, for which great credit is due to Dr. LIGHTHILL, will no doubt prove a means of saving much misery, and perhaps many lives."

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF OBSTETRICS.
By GUNNING S. BEDFORD, A. M., M. D.,
Professor of Obstetrics, the Diseases of Women and Children, and Clinical Obstetrics, in the University of New-York; Author of Clinical Lectures on the Diseases of Women and Children.
Illustrated by four Colored Lithographic Plates and ninety-nine Wood Engravings.
One superb 8vo. volume of over 750 pages. Price $4 00 by mail, free of postage.
SECOND EDITION, CAREFULLY REVISED.
WILLIAM WOOD & COMPANY, New-York.

The rapid sale of this work, in these troublous times, has been remarkable, the first edition having been exhausted in but little over four months from the day of publication. The following extracts will indicate the enthusiastic reception by the Medical Press, both at home and abroad.

From the New-York American Medical Times.

No treatise on obstetric science has ever received such high and universal commendation by the Medical Press of this country and of Europe. In matter and arrangement, in philosophic views, in elegance as well as clearness of expression, there is no work in the English language on the same subject which, in our opinion, can compare with it. The book exhibits internal evidence of intense labor and the most extensive research.

From the New-York American Medical Monthly.

The greatest fault we can find with this work is, not that any portion of it is bad, but that some parts are so superlatively excellent that even the brilliancy of others is obscured. Hereafter, whether as student or practitioner, the obstetrician will need no other book, as instructor, guide, or authority, than Bedford's "Principles and Practice."

From the New-York North American Journal of Homœopathy.

Dr. Bedford's book deals with accumulated facts and profound generalizations, in which none but the clearest intellect and the most critical observer can be perfectly at home. In fullness of detail, lucidity of arrangement, and philosophical analysis, Prof. Bedford's "Principles and Practice of Obstetrics" will long stand as a model work, and will become the favorite text-book in the schools, as well as the most valued guide of the practitioner.

From the Edinburgh Medical Journal.

The book is so good, and so far excels the generality of text-books on obstetrics, that we wish our readers to be impressed with a sense of its soundness, readableness, and worth. We can give Dr. Bedford's volume no higher praise than to say it is remarkable among its contemporaries for soundness in scientific views, readableness as a literary composition, and worth as a guide of practice.

From the Glasgow Medical Journal.

It was with considerable interest that we opened the imposing volume, which Dr. BEDFORD has had given to the world. It has cost its author many an hour of thought and toil, which would, perhaps, have constituted the leisure of a busy life. That the work is calculated to be eminently useful there can be no doubt. We have read the book with great pleasure; as a practical guide it is a truly excellent work—perhaps unsurpassed.

From the Philadelphia Eclectic Journal.

The best book on obstetrics yet published in the English language. It contains such a rich fund of valuable medical knowledge, and is so complete on all the subjects of which it treats, that we earnestly recommend it to our physicians.

From the Chicago Medical Journal.

The announcement of this truly American work by Dr. BEDFORD cannot fail to excite great expectations in the minds of those familiar with his former able treatise on The Diseases of Women and Children, to which was awarded the high and unusual tribute of a translation into the French and German languages. This new book is no failure. Its scientific research and practical detail are evident on every page. Dr. BEDFORD deserves the thanks and gratitude of the profession of the country for having produced a national work of such unequivocal value.

From the Buffalo Medical and Surgical Journal.

Dr. BEDFORD'S book is one of unsurpassed excellence: it is the best work on obstetrics in the English language.

STANLEY'S EASTERN CHURCH.
PUBLISHED THIS DAY,
By C. SCRIBNER, No. 124 Grand-st., N. Y.
LECTURES ON THE HISTORY OF THE EASTERN CHURCH, with an Introduction on the Study of Ecclesiastical History. By A. P. STANLEY, D.D., author of "Life of Dr. Arnold," "Sinai and Palestine," &c. From the second revised London edition. Elegantly printed at the Riverside Press, on laid tinted paper, in one volume, octavo, with map of the Eastern Churches, cloth, gilt. Price, $2 50

The great division of Ecclesiastical History which is the subject-matter of the present volume, has never been thoroughly discussed by any English historian. Dr. Stanley brings to the task a perfect knowledge of the authorities, a personal acquaintance with the East, and a power of word-painting that give a charm to his work perfectly unique and unexampled by any previous volume on Ecclesiastical History. The great epochs of Eastern Christianity—the Council of Nice; the Conversion and Career of Constantine; the Rise of Mahomet and his Religion; the Progress and Establishment

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they have it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

The Recent Reports about French and English Intervention

Confiscation Bills Reported in Both Houses of Congress.

The Thanks of the House to Gen. McClellan.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, May 14.

THE RUMORS OF INTERVENTION.

The resolution of Mr. TRUMBULL, calling on the President to communicate to Congress, if not incompatible with the public interest, whether any European Powers have proposed intervention in American affairs, betrays a groundless sensitiveness on the part of our National Legislature, and implies an unjust doubt of the Administration. Neither the President nor Secretary of State would tolerate for a moment any European interference in our domestic affairs, but would at once expose it to the people, and appeal for means of resistance. It has not been sixty days since both England and France most solemnly affirmed, through their rulers, that under no circumstances could it be their policy to take part in the American civil war. That is enough.

There is no reason to doubt the truth of the TIMES' version of Count MERCIER'S visit to Richmond—that it was to say to the Confederates, that having appealed to arms, and to the judgment of the civilized world, they must abide the decision; that the war has gone against them, and they must accept the fact, and conform to it as a Christian people, and not resist as savages.

The departure of Mr. SEWARD, right-seeing on the Peninsula, at a time when this stupid story of intervention is revamped, is sufficient evidence that it is wholly destitute of foundation.

THE THANKS TO GEN. M'CLELLAN.

ROBERT MORRIS, Esq., Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives, left here to-day for the Headquarters of Gen. MCCLELLAN, bearing with him a handsomely engrossed copy of the resolution of thanks passed by the House on Friday last. Mr. MORRIS, by direction of the Clerk of the House, will deliver those to the General in person.

THE CONFISCATION BILLS.

The first bill reported by Mr. ELIOT, of Massachusetts, to-day, is as follows:

A bill to confiscate the property of rebels for the payment of the expenses of the present rebellion, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the property, moneys, stocks, credits, and effects of the person or persons hereinafter named and specified in this section, are hereby declared forfeited to the Government of the United States, and are hereby declared lawful subjects of prize and capture wherever found, for the indemnity of the United States against the expenses of suppressing the present rebellion—that is to say:

First—Of persons hereafter acting as officers of the army or navy of the rebels now or hereafter in arms against the Government of the United States.

Second—Of persons hereafter acting as President, Vice-President, Member of Congress, or Judge of the so-called Confederate States.

Third.—Of Governors of States, members of State Conventions and Legislatures, and judges of Courts of States now in rebellion.

Fourth.—Of persons who having held an office of honor, trust or profit in the United States, shall hereafter hold an office in the so-called Confederate States.

Fifth.—Of persons hereafter holding any office or employment under the government of the so-called Confederate States, or under any of the several States of said Confederacy, or the laws thereof, whether such office or employment be national, State or municipal in its name or character.

Sixth—Of persons who, owning property in any loyal State or Territory of the United States, or in the District of Columbia, shall hereafter assist and give aid and comfort to such rebellion; and the said property and moneys, stocks, credits, and effects of the persons aforesaid, are hereby declared lawful subjects of capture wherever found; and the President of the United States shall cause the same to be seized, to the end that they may be confiscated and condemned, as hereinafter provided, to the use of the United States; and all sales, transfers, or conveyances by any such person aforesaid of any such property shall be null and void; and it shall be a sufficient bar to any suit brought by such person to recover the possession or for the use of such property, or any of it, to allege and prove that he is one of the persons described in this section.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if any other person or persons, within any State or Territory of the United States, not being named or specified as aforesaid, after the passage of this act, wilfully engage in armed rebellion against the Government of the United States, or aiding or abetting such rebellion, shall not, within sixty days after public warning and proclamation duly given and made by the President of the United States, cease to aid, countenance and abet such rebellion, and return to their allegiance, all the moneys, property, stocks and credits of such person or persons are hereby declared thereafterwards forfeited to the Government of the United States, and the same are hereby declared lawful subjects of prize and capture wherever found; and the President of the United States shall cause the same to be seized, to the end that the same may be confiscated and condemned as hereinafter provided to the use of the United States; and all sales, transfers or conveyances, by any such person of any such property, or of any claim to the service or labor of another after the expiration of the said sixty days from and after such warning and proclamation shall be duly given as aforesaid, shall be null and void; and it shall be a sufficient bar to any suit brought by such person to recover possession or for the use of such property or any of it, or to enforce such service or labor, to allege and prove that he is one of the persons described in this section.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That to secure possession of any of such progerty, situate and being in loyal States or districts in which the ordinary course of judicial proceedings is not obstructed by the rebellion, proceedings in rem. shall be instituted in the name of the United States, within which the estate or property above described, or any part thereof, may be found, which proceedings shall conform as nearly as may be to proceedings in prize cases, or to cases of forfeiture arising under the revenue laws; and in all cases the said property so seized and condemned, whether real or personal, shall be sold, pursuant to such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and the proceeds deposited in the Treasury of the United States for their use and benefit.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the property seized as aforesaid, situate and being in States or districts in which the ordinary course of judicial proceedings is not obstructed by the rebellion, shall be used, [illegible] the ordinary course of judicial proceedings shall be restored in the State or district in which the said property is situate when proceedings in rem. shall be instituted and prosecuted to judgment and sale in the mode aforesaid, and the proceeds applied as aforesaid: Provided, That perishable articles seized under this bill shall be used or sold, pursuant to such rules as may be prescribed as aforesaid, and the proceeds applied as above provided.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the several District Courts of the United States shall have power to issue all process, whether mesne or final, including process as in cases of foreign attachment, and to do every other matter and thing necessary or proper to carry this act into full effect. And the Attorney-General, or any District-Attorney of the United States, or of any Territory, or within [illegible] property or effects may at the time be, or into which the same may be taken, shall institute the proceedings aforesaid.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That in all cases arising under this act where the proceeds of property sold shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, a distinct account shall be kept thereof, and the same shall not be used by the United States until it shall be ascertained whether the person or persons who owned the said property were lawfully indebted to any loyal person or persons who would be liable to loss by reason of such seizure, condemnation and sale; and any such loyal person or persons shall exhibit their claims against the former owner of such property within the space of ninety days after such moneys shall have been deposited in the Treasury of the United States, and not thereafterwards except as hereinafter stated; and such claim shall be exhibited to the Secretary of the Treasury, and such proceedings, proofs and hearings shall be had pursuant to rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, as shall correctly ascertain the true amount of said indebtedness; and thereupon the Secretary of the Treasury shall have the right to pay such indebtedness from the moneys aforesaid: Provided, That if such indebtedness shall exceed the amount so deposited in the Treasury, the several claims exhibited and ascertained shall be suitably paid. And provided further, That no payment shall be made from the Treasury [illegible] paid from the Treasury [illegible] deposited there as aforesaid, [illegible] be received or [illegible] entitled within [illegible] show [illegible] suit on his part, for redress in equity, to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, and according to such rules as shall be prescribed by him for all like cases, and the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury shall be final in the premises.

The second bill of the Select Committee is as follows:

"If any person or persons within the United States shall, after the passage of this act, wilfully engage in armed rebellion against the Government of the United States, or shall wilfully aid or abet such rebellion, or adhere to those engaged in such rebellion, giving them aid and comfort, every such person shall thereby forfeit all claim to the service or labor of any persons commonly known as slaves; and all such slaves are hereby declared free and forever discharged from servitude, anything in the laws of the United States or of any State to the contrary notwithstanding; and whenever thereafter any person claiming the labor or service of any such slave shall seek to enforce his claim, it shall be sufficient defence thereto that the claimant was engaged in said rebellion, or aided or abetted the same, contrary to the provisions of this act. Whenever any person claiming to be entitled to service or labor of any other person, and shall seek to enforce such claim, he shall in the first instance, and before any order shall be made for the surrender of the person whose service or labor is claimed, establish, not only his claim to such service or labor, but also that such claimant has not in any way aided, assisted or countenanced the existing rebellion against the Government of the United States.

THE SENATE CONFISCATION BILL.

The Confiscation bill reported to the Senate to-day by the Special Committee on the subject, is said to have been unanimously agreed on, receiving the support of such conservative members as COLLAMER, WRIGHT, of Indiana, and WILKY, of Virginia. It proposes to confiscate the property of all persons who, after the reëstablishment of Federal authority over their States, and after a proclamation giving them a reasonable time to lay down their arms, and cease opposition to the National Government, shall continue the rebellion, or aid and abet those who do. A bill in this form would probably receive the unanimous vote of both Houses of Congress.

THE ARMY BILL.

The Army bill, which passed the House to-day, appropriates $421,000,000 for the year ending with June, 1863. Besides this, $208,000,000 have been voted during the present session for the current army expenses and deficiencies for the present fiscal year.

THE RECOGNITION OF HAYTI AND LIBERIA.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs to-day instructed Mr. SOOCH, of the Committee, to report the Senate bill to send Commissioners to Hayti and Liberia, with a recommendation that it pass.

TIME FOR THE ELECTION OF CONGRESSMEN.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Elections, has prepared a report fixing the Tuesday following the first Monday in November, as the time for the election of Congressmen in each of the States. In many States this will save an additional election every four years, when a President is elected.

RETURN OF GEN. ROSECRANS.

Gen. ROSECRANS has returned from his great exploration of the mountains of Western Virginia. In the course of his travels he found Gen. BLENKER at the head of his Division, and speaks of the General and his men in high terms. BLENKER'S supply train had not come up, and as a necessity his whole Division was living on the resources of the country. Gen. BLENKER is now with Gen. FREMONT, and the headquarters of the latter is in the field, and he is commanding an advance movement in person.

THE REPORT ABOUT GEN. LOVELL.

The report from Cairo, that Gen. LOVELL, with 30,000 troops, had joined BEAUREGARD, is known in Washington to be wholly absurd. LOVELL had not the third of that force when he left New-Orleans, and they were a motley set of craven city loafers called "Home Guards," whose presence would be weakness at Corinth.

THE WASHINGTON WATER WORKS.

The House Committee on the District of Columbia is about to report a bill releasing Gen. MEIGS from the superintendency of the construction of the Water works to this city, and transferring the works to other hands—probably to the control of the Secretary of the Interior.

BRIGADIERS CONFIRMED.

The Senate, in Executive session to-day, confirmed Col. TYLER, of the regular army, and Col. BURBRIDGE, of the Kentucky Volunteers, to be Brigadiers.

THE DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, May 2, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 50.—The Department of Kansas is hereby restored as described in General Orders No. 97, 1861, as follows:

To include the State of Kansas, the Indian Territory west of Arkansas, the Territories of Nebraska, Colorado and Dacotah. Headquarters at Fort Leavenworth. By order of the Secretary of War.

L. THOMAS, Adjt.-Gen.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, May 14.

Mr. WRIGHT, of Indiana, (Union,) presented a petition from the citizens of Indiana, asking Congress to leave off the agitation of the Negro question and attend to the business of putting down the Rebellion. He said he believed those were the sentiments of a large majority of the people of his State.

On motion of Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) the resolution to suspend the payments of troops actually employed in the Department of the West was taken up. He stated that under the act, as has been reported, great frauds have been perpetrated, and the only remedy is to have a commission appointed to investigate the claims.

After a discussion the resolution was laid over.

The resolution by Mr. POWELL, of Kentucky, (Union,) asking the Secretary of State for the number and names of prisoners arrested in the State of Kentucky; how long imprisoned; where they are, &c., was taken up.

The question was on the amendment by Mr. SUMNER, that the President be requested to inform the Senate, if compatible with the public interest, concerning the arrests in Kentucky—which was adopted—Yeas, 30; Nays, 7.

Mr. POWELL offered an amendment to Mr. SUMNER'S amendment, which the Chair said was substantially the same as the original resolution; therefore it was not in order.

Mr. POWELL appealed from the decision of the Chair. The decision was sustained—Yeas, 34; Nays, 1—(Mr. POWELL.)

Mr. POWELL read a letter concerning an interview by the citizens of Kentucky with the Secretary of State, when he refused to give them any information, and said he did not care a d—n for the opinion of Kentucky, but meant to hold her in the Union, &c.

The resolution, as amended, was adopted.

Mr. CLARK, of New-Hampshire, (Rep.,) from the Special Committee on Confiscation, reported a bill.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Rep.,) offered a resolution that the President inform the Senate, if consistent with the public interests, of any information he may have of any design on the part of any foreign Power to intervene in the contest now existing, and whether any foreign nation has made any arrangements with the insurgents, or has it in contemplation to do so.

Laid over.

The Indian Appropriation bill was taken up.

After consideration and an amendment, the Senate went into Executive session. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, May 14.

Mr. WALTON, of Vermont, (Rep.,) reported back from the Committee on Printing the joint resolutions requiring the Superintendent of the Census to keep records of the names of adult males, heads of families and freeholders.

The subject was discussed, and the resolution passed.

Mr. ELIOT, of Minnesota, (Rep.,) from the Select Committee on Confiscation, reported two bills. He said the time for the consideration of this subject ought not much longer to be postponed. He suggested it be postponed and be made the special order for Monday next.

Mr. COX, of Ohio, (Dem.,) inquired whether the gentleman proposed to permit full discussion.

Mr. ELIOT did not know what the genteman meant by this, but he was disposed to allow reasonable time for debate.

The first bill provides that all estates, property and moneys of persons holding, or hereafter holding offices under the so-called Confederacy, be forfeited to the United States, proceedings to be brought de novo, and the President required to issue proclamations giving sixty days warning.

Mr. PHELPS, of Missouri, (Union,) suggested that the bills be made the special order for Tuesday, after the morning hour, and the residue of the week be given for debate.

Mr. ELIOT acquiesced in this, and further, that the vote be taken on Monday week on both bills.

Mr. SHERFIELDER, of Ohio, (Rep.,) offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Interior to inform the house what retrenchment can be made in the expenditures. Passed.

Mr. WICKLIFFE, of Kentucky, (Union,) had ineffectually endeavored to offer an amendment, calling on the Secretary of War to state whether he had provided arms and clothing to arm the fugitive slaves in the South.

The House went into Committee on the Army Appropriation bill.

Mr. CRISFIELD, of Maryland, (Union,) spoke on the general subject of confiscation and the Constitutional power of Congress to pass laws for that purpose, and arguing that, even if this power existed, it would be inexpedient to exercise it under existing circumstances, as it would render the war interminable and the restoration of the Union impossible.

Mr. CALVERT, of Maryland, (Union,) offered the following:

Provided, That no portion of the appropriation in this bill shall be applied to keeping, supporting or equipping negroes or fugitive slaves for service in the army of the United States.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) for reasons which he stated, hoped this would be voted down.

Mr. WICKLIFFE had written to the War Department for information on the subject, but he received no answer. He had learned that slaves when they wanted to return to their masters had been restrained from so doing by the military authorities. Eight slaves had been killed or shot by military order, while trying to escape from the control of the military authorities.

Mr. STEVENS trusted they would not be troubled with the delicate question about slaves.

Mr. FESSENDEN, of Maine, (Rep.,) said it was no disgrace for any man, black or white, to help put down this rebellion. It is no disgrace to employ black as well as white men in the service of the United States.

Mr. KELLOGG, of Illinois, (Rep.,) would keep out of Congress all mischievous legislation. The conservative men of Congress would meet every time pernicious measures were presented.

Mr. STEVENS—Then let them meet immediately.

Mr. PHELPS, of Missouri, (Union,)—This is a war of white men, not of negroes nor Indians. So he deprecated the employment of negroes.

Mr. CALVERT'S proposition was rejected.

The House passed the Army Appropriation bill without amendment. Adjourned.

UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

News from the Capital—Gen. Mosquera in Antioquia with 8,000 Men—Capture of Gen. Enao—The War Nearly Ended—National Convention in Cartagena.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Monday, May 5, 1862.

The British steamer Solent, which left Cartagena on the 3d inst., arrived at Aspinwall next day. She brings letters from Bogota to April 15.

Gen. MOSQUERA, Provisional President, was at Piedras, in the State of Boyaca, on the frontier of Antioquia, with a large force, and unless the latter submits at once to the new Government, would attack the forces of Gov. JERALDO, who has a much less number of men than MOSQUERA, and who is without the war material necessary for a successful defence. Gen. ENAO, in whom all the hopes of the Conservatives or Reactionists were centered, was taken prisoner, as before rumored, in the State of Cauca, by Gen. LOPEZ, of the Liberal or Mosquera forces, and was on his way to the camp of the Provisional President. On the news of this disaster reaching Medellin, the capital of Antioquia, and of the approach of Gen. MOSQUERA, the Governor called a meeting of the Assembly, to deliberate upon the course that should be taken. MOSQUERA has sent two Commissioners, by invitation, to this convocation, and it is not at all improbable that peace will be made between the two parties, by the acknowledgment of MOSQUERA'S rule, without further bloodshed.

CANAL, who lately attacked and was driven out of Bogota, has arrived at Medellin, and joined JERALDO, having lost most of his men in his difficult march to that place. It is thought the whole Reactionary force in Antioquia and Cauca does not exceed 4,000 men.

Gov. SALGAR, of Santander, had, in a conflict on the 16th March, defeated and broken up the guerrillas left behind in that State by CANAL.

In the State of Cundinamarca the guerrillas, who have kept Bogota in such constant agitation, have fled to Nemocan and Choconta, pursued by Gen. SANTOS ACOSTA with a large force. These guerrillas, under the command of SECUNDINO SANCHES, were also in a quarrel among themselves, one portion claiming MATEO VIANA, who lately absconded from Bogota, as their commander, while another portion adhered to SANCHES.

Gen. MOSQUERA, under date of April 5, had issued a decree calling a National Convention to meet in the City of Cartagena, on the 6th of August next, to definitely constitute the Government. In case he is unable to be present, the Presidency of the Convention will be in the hands of Gov. NIETO.

A son of Gen. MOSQUERA arrived at Aspinwall yesterday, on the Solent, on his way to St. Thomas. He is charged with money to pay another installment of the interest in Europe of the foreign debt. A private letter from a gentleman in high position at Bogota, who is a moderate Liberal, but not a warm adherent of MOSQUERA, concludes thus:

"Four States of the centre of the Republic, and three on the coast, being entirely free from armed enemies to the new Government, the Convention can act freely and authoritatively, although the campaign in the remaining States of Antioquia and Cauca may be retarded somewhat, in order that as little sacrifice as possible may be made of the lives of our soldiers. The army of Gen. LOPEZ has repassed the Cordilleras, (without losing a single man,) in order to reorganize and to cooperate with the main force, led in person by the President. Of course, the plan of the campaign is a secret that rests with the Commander-in-Chief; but when we consider that MOSQUERA and LOPEZ have with them 8,000 men, and that as soon as SANCHEZ is disposed of they will be joined by 2,000 more men at least; that PAYAN, ABRATE and NIETO are not idle; and, that so soon as additional arms reach here, the force can be raised to any number that may be needed; and when it is further considered that ENAO is prisoner, and the forces of JERALDO, ARBOLEDA and CANAL are reduced to the occupation of only a portion of Antioquia and the north of Cauca, with less than 4,000 men, all told, it will be admitted that the final campaign, although it may cost dear to both parties, can scarcely fail bringing, in a very short time, order and liberty out of chaos, through the success of that energetic old soldier, MOSQUERA."

The steamer Anne, which ought to bring us important news from the Pacific State of Cauca, is overdue. Perhaps I will be able to telegraph her news to Aspinwall before the Champion leaves.

We have no news of local importance. Her Britannic Majesty's war ship Devastation left Panama last week for Acapulco, Mexico, so that we have only the United States steam-frigate Saranac and storeship Warren in port. The United States brig Perry, and storeship Falmouth are at Aspinwall.

ARCHIBALD C. PEACHY, Esq., of the firm of (Gen.) [illegible] of Panama, who was on the [illegible] on account of [illegible] and voyage home, [illegible] before his arrival. He is leaving with the Rear, United States Consul at Aspinwall, to superintend, and it is hoped will be able to proceed on to Washington by same steamer, which will call on the 10th.

There is some confusion in Carthagena regarding the other placed on the New-Granadian Consul, between the old and new United States Consuls, as to who is who. At Cartagena Mr. MAYNEGRE claims to be United States Consul, MESQUERA refusing to acknowledge Mr. FOSTER, the new appointee. MESQUERA also refuses to recognize Mr. DAVIES at Rio Hacha.

THE BURNING OF TROY.

Reception and Speech of Parson Brownlow.

Interesting Meeting in Aid of the Sufferers by the Troy Conflagration---Reception of Capt. Bailey.

A large and influential meeting of merchants and other citizens of New-York was held at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday noon, in response to a call for pecuniary aid to the sufferers by the Troy fire. Mayor OPDYKE was called to the Chair, and, in opening the meeting, said the object of the gathering was to devise some means for the relief of the sufferers by the conflagration in our sister city of Troy—a conflagration which, in proportion to the size of the city, is as great an affliction as the great fire of 1835 was to New-York, which would be recollected by many present. The citizens of Troy at that time responded with great liberality for our relief, and it was, therefore, most fitting that we should respond with even greater liberality in this their hour of need.

Mr. PROSPER M. WETMORE read a series of resolutions, appointing a Committee to carry out the objects of the meeting, by collecting and forwarding subscriptions as rapidly as possible. He read extracts from a letter written by a citizen of Troy to S. SLOAN, Esq., President of the Hudson River Railroad, depicting the fearful ravages of the flames, the destruction of property, and destitution among the suffering families.

RECEPTION AND SPEECH OF CAPT. BAILEY.

Pending the consideration of the resolutions, Mr. WETMORE begged leave to introduce to the meeting their distinguished fellow-citizen, Capt. BAILEY, of the navy, who had conferred such services on the country in connection with the attack on New-Orleans. Capt. BAILEY said:

GENTLEMEN: I consider that the compliment which has just been paid by this honorable body is paid to the Flag-officer of our squadron, Com. FARRAGUT, and I am merely a representative of that brave officer, who so gallantly supported the attack on New-Orleans. I have never been used to speaking in public, yet I will make a few remarks with regard to the great principles which are illustrated in that attack. It is demonstrated that no fortification on land can stop a squadron like that which we had from coming up to New-York City, past your forts, and even to London Bridge, if their navy will keep out of the way. We will pass any brick and mortar or granite fortification. There is another principle connected with our branch of the service. The inention of iron-clad vessels represents on the sea what the fortress formerly did on land. These iron-clad boats can pass up the rivers throughout the country, and prove a powerful adjunct to the army in reclaiming the power of our country. The proper way, in my opinion, to quell this rebellion, and keep it in check, is by a fleet of iron-clads—an iron-clad in every port in Secessia, and every stream that they can go up, and keep that part of the country in subjection. I never made a speech before in my life, and I present myself only as the representative of a speech.

Capt. BAILEY was honored with three hearty cheers, and Capt. MARSHALL remarked that if he couldn't make a speech, he (Capt. BAILEY) had done that which was better. [Applause.]

Mayor OPDYKE said, on behalf of those present, that they were delighted with the opportunity of seeing Capt. BAILEY, and of hearing his voice. It gave them exceeding gratification to see one who had served his country, not only on this, but on other occasions. [Applause.]

THE TROY CONFLAGRATION AGAIN.

Mr. WETMORE stated that a number of gentlemen had already busied themselves in raising subscriptions for the Troy sufferers: C. H. Marshall, $500; Spofford, Tileston & Co., $500; Jas. Boorman, $500; John D. Wolfe, $250; Alexander Duncan, $250; R. L. & A. Stuart, $100; Samuel Sloan, $100; George Opdyke, $100; Samuel Wetmore, $200; Alderman Farley, $50; Rev. S. T. Duryea, $50; Ezra Nye, $50; Sheffield & Co., $50; J. S. Fountain, $30.

Mr. WALLACE stated that various gentlemen had given privately the sum of $4,000, which had been already sent to Troy, and $1,000 more was ready to be sent.

Rev. Mr. DURYEA, of this City, made an interesting statement of the extent of the suffering occasioned by the conflagration. He estimated that 10,000 persons, mainly poor Protestant families and small traders, had their worldly effects entirely consumed; that most of the burnt district consisted of residences, and that relief in money and clothing should be sent immediately.

On motion, Mr. J. C. WILLIAMS was made Treasurer of the fund.

Mr. C. H. MARSHALL made an earnest appeal in behalf of the most energetic and thorough relief of the sufferers, and the resolutions were then adopted.

Mr. ATWOOD, of Troy, related some thrilling incidents of the conflagration, showing the terrible suffering that was occasioned among the people of Troy.

RECEPTION AND SPEECH OF PARSON BROWLOW.

Meanwhile, Parson BROWNLOW, accompanied by Aldermen CHIPP and FARLEY, and other members of the City Government, together with a deputation from the Young Men's Republican Union, had entered the room.

Mayor OPDYKE said: We have already done honor to one of our military heroes, and have now the pleasure to say that there is among us one of the moral heroes of our country, who, in my opinion, deserves as much credit for the part he has performed as any other man in this country. [Applause.] I take great pleasure in introducing to the meeting Rev. Dr. BROWNLOW.

Parson BROWNLOW, after the great applause had subsided, said:

GENTLEMEN: I thank you for the reception you have given me, and for your demonstrations of esteem and regard. I am here briefly—only to pay you a visit, upon the invitation of two or three of your members, this morning. I have no speech to make to you. I may say, however, in reply to the compliment paid me by the Mayor, that I have never felt—and in this I desire to say exactly what is true—in the expression of my opinions, I never felt that I deserved any consideration whatever, for anything that I have done. I have done my duty to the best of my ability, at the risk, to be sure, of my neck, but, that is a small matter when compared with the interests of our glorious country. [Applause.] The man, North or South, who would not risk his property, his life, and, I had liked to say, his hope of heaven, to put down this infinitely infernal rebellion and assaults upon the flag of our country does not deserve to be an American citizen. [Uproarious applause.] The Apostle Paul tells us—and I presume you are all familiar with his writings—that he fought with beasts at Ephesus. [Laughter.] That was a terrible enemy. I have done a little more than that (without claiming superiority to the Apostle,) I have fought the devil and TOM WALKER or JEFF. DAVIS and his legions. [Laughter and applause.] I never expected to see New-York again. I have visited this City on many occasions, and traveled all over the North, but I never expected, three months ago to see this City again. I expected to be looking up a rope. [Laughter.] I was confined in a prison where there were one hundred and fifty others, whose only crime or offence was that they defended the flag of our country. None of them deserved hanging for that more than I did, for I had hit the rebels harder and oftener, and called them harder names than anybody else. Through my tri-weekly I poured hot shot into them, from JEFF. DAVIS down to the lowest reptile in their ungodly Confederacy. [Laughter and applause.] It was marvelous to my friends that they did not execute me. They sent me to jail, where I was confined during the months of December, January and February. They came to the gates sometimes with coffins, bristling with bayonets guarding them. We knew that somebody was to be hung, but we did not know which one. You may imagine our feelings. I often thought my time had come, and said so frequently. I took the precaution, for I had pencil and paper, to draft a speech which I intended to ask leave to deliver under the gallows, before swinging off. [Laughter.] But, gentlemen, by their not hanging me, the world has lost an exceedingly rare production in the way of a speech. [Laughter and applause.] It was a eulogy upon JEFF.
